Beggars; an Emerging Problem in India

India has been facing the problem of increasing number of beggars. Even this bulge of beggars is affecting the image of country in front of world. Though the number of beggars, which present in overall the country, is unknown, but, in order to overcome this problem, the reasons of growth of beggars has been studied. The major reason is that in India, religious values asked people for charity, which in return will be benefited to them in next life. Secondly, the begging is considered to be a hereditary, thus becomes a responsibility to follow by generations. In third, people fear from the curse of the beggars and they give whatever they demand of beggar, who is even more financially stable than that of man. Further, poverty, unemployment, and population growth are considered to be other reasons of the rise of number of beggars.
