

QUESTION 02

Title:- Beggary in India and its causes and remedies

Begging in India has become a fast spreading profession, especially in its holy cities which are now being called as cities of beggars and dust. The most important cause of increasing beggary is the religious thought of getting relief in the next world by offering charity to beggars. Another cause is the transformation of profession of beggary from one generation to another. Along with it, poverty and unemployment are also the root cause of the issue. Even a p. able person dressed in aged and coloured dress can be seen begging from door to door. The situation gets worse when ignorant masses, by fearing the cursed words of the beggars, offer them more than their needs. whereas, beggary in the west is considered as crime. They are of the view that those who cannot work have no right to eat. To overcome the problem in the country, it is important to aware the masses about no promise of liberation by providing charity to able-bodied persons who are adding to the idleness and ~~entire~~ increased poverty. Another measure is to educate people public about social sciences that can help in gradual decrease of the issue.

Moreover, government need to formulate laws to keep the strict check on the beggars specially in the holy cities.

As, it is the high time to look the picture wisely where ~~we~~ even suited booted beggars are exploiting the masses by adopting subtler ways.

Question 7

A student's life duty is to learn from teachers and books, which can enlighten the dark paths of his life. Uniformity and consistency is required to perform this duty. Every external influence which is contrary to it has to be strictly separated from the teaching circle. Otherwise it would be dangerous because student's training will remain incomplete and the time that should have been spent in the pursuit of knowledge would be devoted to tumultuous activities of political parties. Our country needs scholars more than the political workers, who at the same time are the comprehensive source of eastern knowledge, western knowledge, religious knowledge and worldly knowledge. Obviously such versatile people can only be born when political factors should not interfere in academic careers. It is said that our educational system is of low quality as compared to that of the west. To some extent, this is the result of our economic conditions. And maybe saying that would not be devoid of truth that most of our teachers have failed to ignite the spark of knowledge in the hearts of the students. But most of the part of responsibility is dependently imposed on the students themselves.
