

Islamic Studies

O.2 Introduction

Zakat is the fourth pillar of Islam. It was made compulsory in the year 4 A.H. Zakat is important for the well-being of the Islamic community, as it enables circulation of wealth. It is also an essential part of the economic system of the country, as it makes it more equitable in nature. The rate of zakat is 2.5% of the total wealth and nisab is 75 tolas of gold. Zakat makes the society a well-functioning and integrated one.

The philosophy of zakat

The term zakat literally means to 'purify'. By paying the poor and the needy out of one's wealth, a person cleanses his/her wealth and makes it pure and lawful.

i) Rate of zakat

Zakat is given at the rate of 2.5% of one's entire entire wealth, condition being that the wealth has been earned through lawful means

iii) Nisab in Zakat

Nisab in Zakat is 9.5 tolas of gold or 52.5 tolas of silver. The nisab of Zakat has been decided after careful consideration.

Recipients of Zakat

The recipients of Zakat include the following

There are 8 recipients of Zakat. Zakat is not given to parents, children, and grandparents.

The importance of Zakat

i)

Well-fare of the society

Zakat is important for the Muslim society as it leads to the welfare of the Muslim state. Zakat does this by enabling everyone to fulfil their needs and requirements.

ii)

Circulation of wealth

By giving out to the needy and the poor of the society, the rich help circulate wealth in the society. This ensures that excess wealth is not in the hands of the few and is available for those who need it.

iii,

Promoting equality in Society

• Through the distribution of wealth, Zakat promotes equality in society. This reduces the divide between the haves and the have-nots in the Islamic society.

iv) Purification of wealth
When Zakat is given out, it purifies the wealth of the person who gives it out and makes it clean for his or her personal use.

Benefits of Zakat

i) Spiritual Benefits

The Quran says

"And perform prayers, and give out charity, and perform Hajj those who can afford it."

Similar to prayers and fasting, Zakat benefits the spirit by bringing the person closer to Allah. Zakat is a form of worship and it is must recognized as spiritually fulfilling as other forms of worship.

Moral Benefits

The moral benefits of zakat are that it reduces greed, avarice, and deception in society. It encourages people to stay on the right track and keep their conscience with regard to their wealth intact.

Social Benefits

By making people realize and tend for those who are less well-off than them, zakat integrates the Muslim society. It also reduces inequality in the society and makes people more empathetic towards each other.

Conclusion

To conclude, Zakat is an essential component of not only the economic system of Islam but also of its social, moral, and spiritual aspects. Zakat helps unite the Muslim society further by decreasing ^{the} present differences within it.

Q.3

In troduction

The Quran says

6 And when you judge, judge between them justly. 9
(Al-Quran)

Justice refers to fairness and adherence to rules and principles while making decisions concerning anything. These decisions could encompass decisions of life and death, about distribution of income or wealth, about share in property, and also about the political, social, and economic systems of Islam. Justice has to be practiced in every aspect of a Muslim's life.

The system of justice in Islam

↓

Holding Accountable for one's actions

In Islam, be it anyone. The head of a state or a person. The person is held accountable for his or her actions. If a person has done something wrong he or she would have to give a justification for it and if they cannot do so, then their actions would be penalized.

ii)

Transparency

Transparency is an important component of justice. Actions carried out in a transparent & manner are appreciated and they are not called into question.

iii)

Justice by Holy Prophet (pbuh)

The Holy Prophet (pbuh) set an example of leading a life of justice for all to follow. The Quran says, "Indeed in Prophet (pbuh) you have a beautiful pattern of conduct."

The Holy Prophet (pbuh) was known as Sadiq and Amin.

This was mainly due to his fair and peaceful nature. Throughout his life, in all his dealing the Holy Prophet (pbuh) exhibited justice and fairness whether as a business or as the leader of the Muslim Ummah.

iv)

Justice by the Caliphate
when Hazrat Abu Bakr became the first Caliph of Islam, he said,

'And follow me if I follow the teachings of the Quran and the Sunnah and if I am right. And do not follow me if I do not follow the teachings of the Quran and Sunnah and if I am wrong.'

This delineates the importance of doing what is the right as a ruler or an administrator.

All the caliphs during their reigns exerted fairness and justice. They always followed the teaching of Islam and whenever an issue would crop up, they would deal with it in a just and equitable manner.

The judicial system of Islam

Islam has an established judicial system which deals with matters on all levels be they individual, communal or of state level in a judicious manner.

The Holy Prophet (pbuh) said

"And listen even if a negro is appointed as your head."

This showcases that irrespective of a person's caste, creed or color, he must be listened to and followed, if he is in the right and is acting justly.

On another occasion

the Holy Prophet (pbuh) said,

"Even if my own daughter Fatimah had stolen, I would have cut off her hands."

This reflects the exceedingly just and fair nature of the Islamic judicial system established by Holy Prophet (pbuh). The system was the same for all.

Importance of Justice in Islam

Justice is an important aspect of Islam. Islam enjoins everyone to be just in their dealings and activities.

(j)

Building a Well functioning Society

A just society is a well functioning society, as people are able to reap the benefits of their work in an effective manner

iii, Constructing a prosperous society

It is a just society which ultimately becomes a prosperous society. When things are done in a fair and rule-based manner, the final result is progress and prosperity.

Conclusion

In Islam, justice is an important concept. It helps the Islamic society function as an integrated whole. Allah admires those who are fair and just and the Holy Prophet (pbuh) too, enjoined the muslims to be fair and accurate in their dealings.

Q.5

Introduction

The Caliphate is system of governance and rule by the Caliphs of Islam. Caliphs are pious, righteous and God-fearing leaders or members of the Muslim Ummah. Caliphs are usually appointed based on their piety and rightful deeds. The first four rightly-guided Caliphs of Islam were Hazrat Abu Bakr, Hazrat Umar, Hazrat Usman and Hazrat Ali. These Caliphs were highly regarded in their community. They were looked up to for guidance and direction.

The salient features of governance and accountability under the Caliphate

i)

Rule of Law

Governance in Islam includes Rule of Law as one of its main aspects. Without rule of law, governance is not possible in an Islamic society. Rule of law leads to a stable society.

iii) Justice

Justice is another important feature of governance in Islam. The Quran and the Sunnah enjoin Muslims to practice justice in every aspect of their lives.

The Quran says

"And when you judge, judge between them justly."

iii) Consultation

In Islam, governance is conducted through a process of consultation. The concept of Majlis-e-Shura is exceedingly important in Islam. It is through consultation that a decision is made in an Islamic society. The Caliphs used the same process.

iv) Vicegerency of Allah

The head of a government or Caliph in Islam is, in effect the vicegerent of Allah ^{on} the world. This Vicegerent or representative must be head in all matters concerning the Muslim state or the community.

The Holy Prophet (pbuh) said

'And listen even if a Negro is appointed over you.'

v) Sovereignty of Allah

In governance in Islam sovereignty belongs to Allah. No matter what decision is made the head of a state or a government, the ultimate decision lies with Allah. Without the will of Allah nothing can happen. Thus, governance in Islam should be conducted based on this principle.

vi

Accountability of leaders

The Quran says,

'You will be held accountable for your actions, and he will be held accountable for his actions'

(AL-Quran)

This indicates that each and every person would be held accountable for their actions. The leaders of the muslim state would not have to be accountable just to Allah (S.W.T) but also to the people he is serving.

vii,

System of accountability

As part of governance in Islam, a system of accountability has been established. Under this system people would be held accountable and answerable for their actions and undertakings. This system is an equalizer in the Islamic society. All will be held accountable irrespective of their caste, color, race, or creed.

Conclusion

Caliphate in Islam is an important concept. This concept encompasses leadership in the Muslim community. The salient features of governance and accountability in Caliphate are the same as the features of governance and accountability prescribed for the form of rule in Islam in general.

Q6

Introduction

Before the advent of Islam, the women of Arabia did not have any rights. They were treated like chattels and animals. The birth of a female child was looked down upon, moreover, many female infants were buried alive after their birth. This demonstrates how pathetic and miserable the lives of women were before Islam. Islam ^{has} bestowed many rights and duties on women. It has also helped improve the status of women in society and life.

Women Rights in Islam

i) Rights of a mother

Islam has given a very high status to mothers. The Holy Prophet (Pbuh) said, 'Paradise lies at the feet of your mother.'

i) Islam encourages Muslims to respect their mothers and take care of them in old age and sickness.

Rights of a wife

Islam has bestowed many rights to the wife. A woman has the right to obtain maintenance or Haq-Mehr from her husband at the time of marriage. Moreover, a husband cannot marry for the second time without the consent of his wife.

Right to choose who to marry

A woman cannot be forced to marry someone without her consent. Her consent is required before marrying her off to a person. She has the right to reject a person.

if she is not comfortable with being with him.

iv) Right to own property Women have the right to own property in Islam.
There is a share of ownership for the male child and also for the female child in the inherited property.

v) Right to acquire education Both men and women are encouraged to acquire an education in Islam.
The Holy Prophet (Pbuh) said
"It is a duty of a Muslim both male and female to seek knowledge." Thus, enlightenment and knowledge were made important pursuits for Muslim men and women.

vi)

Rights of a daughter

A daughter has rights similar to that of a son in Islam. She is entitled to the same inheritance to which a son is entitled. The daughter must obey her parents and the parents must provide for her.

vii,

Right to seek Employment

Women are not discouraged from seeking employment and earn a livelihood in Islam. If a woman wants to start a business in Islam, she can do so. In fact, the first woman to convert to Islam, Hazrat Khadija (R.A) was a business woman.

(viii)

Protection of honour

A woman's honour and dignity are to be protected in Islam. A woman must be treated with respect and kindness. She must also be given space and time for her personal growth and development.

Conclusion

Islam has honored women with many rights and privileges. It has, in effect, improved the status of women and has placed them on a path of self-discovery and betterment. The women must be treated as equal to men.

The Quran says,

'And he created men and women as equals, except that men have a degree above women.'

(AL-Quran)

On another occasion the Quran says,

'All are equal in the eyes of Allah, except in terms of righteousness.'

(AL-Quran)