The topic sentence should start with an argument not a quote.

According to Aristotle "Man is social animal". So, he can't live his life in isolation. He is not able to fulfill his required needs solely. For this purpose he needs to interact with other human beings. Thus, every human are interdependent on each other to fulfill their needs. For this purpose they need to have a strong

Unnecessary detail

§ Thus, humanity means to save someone when he is in danger and never be the reason behind anyone's death. Furthermore, help those who need help and respect everyone's dignity.

Conclude the paragraph here. It will become incoherent.

Humanity does not mean the relation between human to human only, but showing sympathy to animals is also included in humanity. Animals also need protection of life and to be respected. Unfortunately humans have become animal by their act. In developing countries there is no animal shelter for animal. They live on the road and become the abused by humans.
