Beginning in India: a social conundrum

Begging: A Profession In India

The beggars in India are now professional. Even the holy cities like Varanasi are hub of beggars. The number of beggars are not ~~the concern~~ but their impact on India society is the concern. Even the visitors from abroad had witnessed the beggars. The reasons are so many but the main reason is in India society it is religious duty to give charity to others as it contributes in the life after. So, this ultimately resulted in increase in number of beggars. Even the physically perfect persons beg by wearing special type of begging cloths. The people feel from the god gave charity to even them. Now it has become profession. In the foreign countries it is crime to beg. Educating masses and making law can reduce the beggars and strict implementation of laws can reduce the number of the professionals.

It is the duty of a student's life to have affiliation with books and teachers. They can brighten up the lives. To perform this responsibility constant practice and patience are required. Every external influence should be eliminated from the sphere of studies. To achieve this goal otherwise, the student's training will be incomplete. The precious time that he had to spend in the studies, will be spent in political activities. In our country instead of politicians we need teachers and intellectuals who are able to teach eastern, western, religious and worldly education at the same time. These people's presence is only possible when there is no politics in educational activities.

It is said that our education system is lower than the western system but at some extent it is due to economic condition. ~~But saying~~ ~~this is not true that teachers~~ are unable to ignite the ~~light~~ fire of education in the hearts of the ~~children~~ / students. Most part of the responsibility is however of students.
