

Title: India and the Societal Evil of Begging.

Begging in India: a social conundrum

In India beggars are increasing in numbers as it has become a profession especially in sacred cities. These cities are called the cities of beggars by the foreign visitors. Reasons and causes of begging are not important to investigate their lifestyle and how they affect society are more concerned questions. There could be many reasons of it like Indians are very religious and kind towards beggars. Their sacred writings teaches them to give charity to find eternity in the next life. Their fear of afterlife benefits the beggars. It is shocking that some physically fit people also adopt begging as profession. They beg in street for the sake of money. Some ignorant people are scared of being cursed by these beggars so they give them charity. Educated class of Indians are now finding ways to curb this social issue. In west Parliament has declared begging a crime. In some countries people are warned if they do not work they will get nothing to eat but in India situation is worst. The author said that we should spread awareness that there is no reward in giving charity to able person but it will increase poverty. If people are educated beggars will decrease in numbers. The state should enforce strict laws against begging especially in sacred cities. Begging has become a widespread evil. even today some modern beggars use various ways to exploit people.
