Q:7 Translation

Why r u writing title for translation

It is the duty of a student to get guidance from teachers and books that can illuminate the dark passages of his life. To fulfill this duty, one needs concentration and perseverance. Every external factor that can influence his curricular activities should be put aside. Otherwise, a student's training will be left halfway through. The time that was meant to be utilized in learning would be squandered in political interest and activities. Our country needs scholars and intellectuals, well-versed in eastern, western, religious and secular knowledge rather than more political workers. Such intellectual and scholar will born only when political factors do not interfere in curricular activities. It is said that our education system is poor as compared to that of western education system. To some extent, it is a result of our economic situation but it will not be wrong to say that most of our teachers are unable to instill love of learning in students. However, for most part, students themselves should be held responsible.

Precis Causes and Consequences of Begging

Begging in India: a social conundrum

Author claims that professional beggars have increased significantly in India. Their conspicuous growth has got the attention of tourists. Author is concerned about their negative impacts on society. Religious beliefs and social conscience of public are among the main causes of growing number of beggars. People give them money out of fear. Those beggars who are not even deserving. However, educated and modern public has become aware about this issue after knowing the fact that begging is banned in most of developed world. There is a need to educate public about evil consequences of begging and giving charity to undeserving people. The government needs to implement policies to contain the increase in begging. Additionally, public has to be more careful because modern beggars have adopted nuanced ways to deceive people of their money.
