Question num 1

The rising numbers of beggary and beggars have portrayed the image of Indian cities as cities of beggars and dirt. There is no statistic available regarding numbers of beggars. The real concern for practical reform is not the cause and condition of beggars, but what impact they could have on the existence of societies. As evident to visiting foreigners, the numbers of beggars are increasing. There are multifarious reasons for the increasing number. Religion is one of them. Religion promotes beggary in the form of charity as article of faith and to secure heaven through good deeds, hence charity. Another reason for rising beggars is the profession of beggars when even highly educated people opt for begging and they

Question number 2

Answer the following question

- (1) According to the author, what is likely to become a scarcity in the future?

Author articulates that the over flow of information and screen time have become so available and intrinsic in our life that the future generation would feel scarcity of freedom. Scarcity of freedom from surroundings full of technologies, devices and social media.

- (2) What ability have people lost thanks to constant inflow of data?

Owing to a constant inflow of information, people have lost the ability to concentrate. The amount of concentration reduces as the focus is distributed in hundreds of areas - News headlines, social media and screen time. This lack of focus impacts the memory.

Q Why does the author say, "we have more and more ways to communicate, but less and less to say?"

The ever present ways of communication make it less valuable. If a person is spoken to every day or we are aware of these happenings through social media, we become less inclined and less interested in communication. Similarly, the overly occupied life makes it artificially busy where people are always full to be in rush without any particular deadline.

Q. Why are people taking an active interest in old-age facts?
 The overly occupied lives of the people have become so monotonous that they have started to seek refuge in old-age facts. Religious commitment, yoga and medita have become means of connecting with the wisdom of old ages, meditation to revive attentiveness, good memory and cognitive ability.

Q. Why is modern man unable to empathise with others?

Modern man is surrounded with continuous bombardment and inflow of information. He is not sensitized how to deal with these technologies. Man becomes self-centred and focuses on individual life rather collective. As a result, the factor of sympathy is declined with the passage of time.
