

Q#2) Precise

Topic: "Begging: A Profession"

The menace of street begging in India has not only become common but also chronic. The prevalence of begging can let alone be gauged by tourists' perception, they have labelled some cities as 'cities of beggars'. There are many causes behind this social evil, but the major one is linked with religion. Giving doles ^{has been} referred as an act of achieving heaven in afterlife. Nevertheless, the social conscience behind giving doles has led to begging as a profession and in some cases it has become a hereditary profession. Begging prevalence is a worry but what is more worrisome is the involvement of abled persons in this menace. Additionally, a considerable number of beggars are wealthier than their patrons. However, motivation on solving this social evil has been taken from the West. The remedy lies in social awareness through educating and state laws restricting begging.
