Begging in India : a social Conundrum

Q2

The Causes and Remedies of Begging in India

The number of beggars in India are increasing day by day, specifically in the holy cities. This is due to certain reasons. First, Indians are very religious and are driven by religious reward. Second, poverty is also a major cause behind begging. Last, unemployment and population growth pave the way for this evil as well. However, the modern educated Indians are concerned about it and are finding ways to eradicate it. They have learnt from the developed countries. In order to eradicate the evil of begging the following measures should be taken. First, people should be aware of the fact that there is no nobility in giving charity to healthy individuals. Second, masses should refrain themselves from donating to able persons. Last the state should make laws to control the growth of beggars.
