Essay:

⇒. "Women are not weak, provided that social, political, educational and economic rights are extended to them."

Believing that women are weak, frail is a false notion. Women are not only equal to men in their performance, but in some fields, they have excelled men. In the medical field, women have been contributing magnificently.

The strength of women can be gauged by the fact that leading women politicians have a great say in the contemporary political landscape.

The number of women increased many folds in politics in the recent times. Likewise, women do wonders in sports, making their nations

Proud of their achievements. In fact, it is now a universally acknowledged fact that women contribute substantially to the field of science and technology. Besides this, those who believe that women are physically weak can examine women soldiers serving their nations.

It is not absolutely esoteric to know the factors that have shaped the anti-women mindset.

The conservative attitude of society is a major factor in creating such false notions. In countries where education is low, people are suffering from such fabricated ideas. In the same manner, feudalism brainwashed people against women. Feudals know that women's empowerment will result in resistance against their interests. Cultural and traditional elements have also been encouraging erroneous ideas among women. Some societies still believe in primitive ideas, which have significantly undermined the due status of women. Misinterpreting religion, some Pseudo scholars have engineered an unsound and baseless perception that women are weak.

To counter such a notion, concerted efforts are required. Sound legislation is imperative for defeating false ideas against women. Women shall be empowered to make decisions for themselves. Stern efforts shall be made to educate the common man about the rights of women.

The role of the media cannot be neglected in empowering women. The religious scholars shall be brought to justice for their anti-women sermons. The contribution of women to the medical field is worthwhile. The medical field would not have enjoyed the zenith of its glory had women abstained from participating in it. Today, a number of women are serving in the field. In some Countries, the number of women in the medical field exceeds that of men, which indicates that women have the potential to surpass even men. The intellectual capacity of women can be gauged by the fact that women pass medical entry tests many times more than men. Today there are a multitude of female medical specialists in various fields. Looking at contemporary politics in different countries, it is not hard to find out the role of women.

Women represent their nations in contemporary world affairs. For instance, some leading women leaders Angela Merkel, Chancellor of Germany, Sheikh Hasina ^{Ex} PM of Bangladesh, Hillary Clinton, an American attorney, and others like Kamala Harris are Vice President of the United States, are the stars of contemporary politics. In the past, some influential women politicians had served in the political arena, including Margaret Thatcher, former PM of UK, Benazir Bhutto, former PM of Pakistan, and Sonia Gandhi, former president of the India Congress Party. The unparalleled performance of women in sports is evidence of the fact that women are not weak. Women do compete with men in sports. Both at the national and international level, women have always made history. Their incredible performance in sports suggests that women are physically as well as psychologically strong enough to outdo men. For instance, some leading sports women are Saina Nehwal, an Indian professional badminton singles player; Sania Mirza, a tennis player; Ronda Rousey, an American professional wrestler; Maria Sharapova, a Russian tennis player; and many more. Science itself stands witness to the fact that women are as Strong as men, women have revolutionized the scientific world. Seventeen women have been awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics, Chemistry, Physiology or Medicine.

Marie Curie, a leading scientist, made history when she received a Nobel Prize for her monumental work on 'radiation'.

Caroline Herschel contributed unprecedentedly to astronomy. Likewise, Rachel Carson, an American biologist and conservationist, worked out revolutionary measures for the global environmental moment.

There are other gifted and well-named women scientists in history who made magnificent discoveries and inventions.

Gone are the days when women are considered unfit for serving in the army. In modern times, women fight side by side with men. Women serving in the armed forces are sent to dangerous places to fight enemies. Many American women soldiers are deployed in Afghanistan. They fight bravely in Pakistan, and women enthusiastically join the armed forces to serve the nation. As of 2013, around 4000 women had been serving in the Pakistan Armed forces.

There are shining career opportunities for females in the Pakistan Army. Women do join it, which gives the impression that women are not weak by any stretch of imagination.

Certain factors are responsible for ~~generating~~ generating misconceptions about women. Believing that women are is nothing but a myth prevailing in a male-dominated society. It is an established fact that man is conservative by nature. His approach is narrow and suffers from myopia. This conservative mindset has generated Mumors about women. In fact, the conservative approach of men has underestimated the capacity of women. The myths about women in society are so intense that those women who surpass men in a field of life are termed "exceptional cases".

Lack of education is another major factor that has added to the misconception about women. In a society where education is at a low ebb, people suffer heavily from false beliefs. In some societies, truth is deliberately manipulated and distorted to hide reality. Such distorted truth cannot be challenged or defeated due to a lack of access to education. Education is the only force that can alter false notions by bringing the truth to light. It is a self-evident truth that in educated societies, women are not considered weak. Thus, women

Feudalism is a leading factor that has contributed widely to the fabrication of nations about women. Feudalism is as old as man itself. Feudal lords have always strived to subjugate each other. Unfortunately, women have been their worst victims. The modern world has not gotten rid of feudalism so far. In order to keep women under thumb, false ideas about women are inculcated and injected into the minds of people. In feudal societies, women are considered a looming threat to the influence and power of the feudalists. Thus, all-out efforts giving any reason. Since time immemorial, women have been undergoing unpleasant experiences on account of such unhealthy trends in society. Driven by the false belief that women are frail, untold atrocities are inflicted against them. The credit goes to the strength of women because, despite all efforts to suppress them, nothing significant has been achieved so far except violence and intimidation. It is said that the last refuge of a scoundrel is violence.

Belief that women are weak interpreters of religion. No religion is anti-women. Except some religions have very explicitly mentioned that men are equal. The fault lies in the pseudo clerics who minister - post 'ordained' of divine. The pseudo clerics ascribe a weak pole to women, because they hold that women inherently weak. Turning a blind eye to the achievements of women, illogical arguments against women are presented. Such a misogynist approach is directed to belittle women and draw a gloomy picture of them, forgetting that a lie cannot hide the truth for a long time.

In order to eradicate the discriminatory approach and falsehoods about women, concrete steps must be taken. Feasible laws shall be legislated to ensure the rights of women. Once the rights of women are legally protected, they will be able to come forward in every walk of life. Their success and progress will make people realize that women are not weak by any definition or by any stretch of imagination.

It is imperative to make space for women in decision making. The narrow and myopic approach towards women cannot be legislated unless they are empowered to make decisions for themselves. Moreover, in social, political and economic spheres, women shall be extended opportunities to make decisions.

~~Common Man~~ 'Common Man' shall be educated about the due rights and status of women. Many women are victims of men's violence because of a lack of education. Men considered that women creatures of lesser gods. Had education been prevalent in society, the perception that women are weak would never have originated in the first place.

The media can play a pivotal role in erasing illogical ideas about women. Daily and weekly organized programs can be arranged on different TV channels to let the world know the achievements of women. Print media also will encourage writers to draw a true picture

The religious scholars who give negative connotations to women shall be dealt with iron hands.

Anti-women sermons shall not be aired.

Instead, governments shall instruct religious scholars to paint a positive picture of women. All religions are very optimistic about women and are against false nations.

Given that women have mammoth achievements in every field of life, it would be unwise to say that women are weak. Women are doctors, scientists, astronauts, professors, and heads of the states. For the prosperity and betterment of the world, women have been contributing immensely. It would be sheer discrimination to turn a blind eye to the positive contribution of women in the modern world. It is primary responsibility of government to ensure the rights of women.
