3- Conclusion

The Essay:

Wars cannot be won and should not be fought. War is a good way to kill, to destroy, to upset but a bad way to win, to conquer and to plunder. The avoidance of war and living peacefully have great impacts on society.

Problems do not kill problems and the worst problem is war as it endangers everything. It is in human nature that he learns from past experiences and if results are devastating, they avoid them. For instance, the results of world wars lead to the understanding of peace making due to which United Nations came into being. Moreover, Germany learned that wars do not make nations great but other factors play vital role such as politics and economy.

Nations do not win a war, armies do. Nations win by progressing over time, by improving literacy rate, standard of life and opportunities for citizens.

Thus, great nation doesn't become great by fighting and plundering other nations instead by working hard with peace by themselves.

First to begin with, great nations prosper and work with peace. Great nations when withdrawn the war and attended the cause of peace, they prospered. Peace is the healing force of every wound of war. Peace can bring victory without bloodshed; a stand without fall and a win without defeat. The example of China can be taken, as today it is the fastest growing and progressing country, teaches the lessons to the world that ^{by} maintaining peace and avoiding war helps in winning the race of success and happiness. Soon after China gained independence, it was indulged in wars many time such as invasion on Tibet (1950), Sino-Indian war (1962), Russian conflict (1969) and Vietnam fight in 1979 which helped China in realizing the real power is power of prosperity and economic strength. Furthermore, the examples of Germany and Japan can also be looked upon. Japanese worked towards a managed economy & peaceful conditions have become the waving flag of Japan's progress & prosperity. The Germans after WWII proudly label their economy as "social-market economy" to show that they have developed a system that has both material and social dimension.

Secondly comes, where there is no justice, such a nation comes under stress. Whenever justice is delayed or denied it causes pessimism in the masses. Society gets imbalanced and when the society loses balance, every walk of life gets disturbed and due to this disturbance anarchy comes which leads to no rights, no rights no existence. Hence such nations are erased from the history. Society can live in poverty but can never live in injustice. When Hitler was bombing London and the Churchill's government was almost crippled, Churchill asked a question: Are our courts dispensing justice? He was informed that the courts were performing well. Then Churchill asked a question: exclaiming with relief that if the courts were working properly then England would win the war. History has witnessed that despite all military might, Germany lost and England won. This demonstrates the importance of law and order. The right of freedom should be given to every citizen. Great nations acknowledges their people will and provide them with health facilities, employment, education and timely justice.

~~This~~ In addition to timely justice, great nation do not create barriers and distinctions among their people. Every person or it could be said all genders have equal rights in great nations. There is no gender discrimination; the right to education, health facilities, justice, job facilities given to everyone and is equal. Great nations withdraw from fighting and attend the cause of their national welfare. They formulate policies, allocate funds and keep vigilance on its implementation. Greatness is achieved by the provision of all rights to masses without discrimination other than the deprivation of the same. Most importantly, avoiding war has great social, political, economic and security impact, wars just ~~costs~~ costs human lives. However, the nations who ~~were~~ recognized the importance of human lives are now gaining benefits from them for instance China and are prospering and setting examples for other nations too to follow them. Not only China, Japan & Germany ~~are~~ are also one of the examples whose comeback ^{after wars} can teach other nations too.
