

Q2

Topic: Misinformation effects on democratic system

Precis: Four billion people will vote this year in different elections. The threat of disinformation has the potential to disrupt democratic process. The perturbation of voters getting influenced by false information is worse. The opponents of democracy might foray a voting process as was the case in Spain last year. There are various methods to cease the spread of misinformation. But implementation demands resolution of three problems namely identifying problem seriousness, classification and upholding democratic rights. (75 words)
