Misinformation: A Threat to Democracy

07/20

Around four billion people will vote in major elections this year, facing significant threats from misinformation and disinformation.

The citizens of a democracy are well-informed. The modern electoral process and campaigns are marred by misleading information.

This misinformation gives air to biasness and the true spirit of democracy is harmd. The electoral process is harmed by both conventional and modern means. Even modern democracies are not safe. However, multiple effective ways can be adopted to counter anti-democratic propoganda. In a democratic environment, the information should be recognized and it should include both democratic norms and freedom of expression.
