

Q1

Corruption: Jeopardizes Society

Corruption normalizes in society, when masses practice it on a lower scale. They argue that it has no consequences because it is practiced on a minor scale. Whereas corruption has catastrophic impacts on society, it leads towards inequality, skepticism. Also, it encourages helplessness, and disappointment in society. That is why justice is impossible in corrupt societies. Furthermore, corruption leads towards political instability, economic decline, and social unrest. Thus, each and every act of corruption needs to be dealt with an iron hand. Therefore, it is only possible if each and every individual denies corruption in society.

Q2

- 1) The primary reason due to which most people fail to keep their New Year resolution is that they know that it is not possible to fulfill, therefore, they fail in order to keep their new year promise.

2) Resolutions tend to be ineffective because new year resolutions are based upon long term planning where they require consistency, perseverance, that is not possible for the individual. It is due to this reason individuals are unable to continue their resolution the whole year.

3) The psychological factors that keeps people making New Year resolutions year after year is the opportunity that is given by the start of the new year. Also, it empowers one to push the restart button where one can start with fresh energy.

4) The more effective approach in order to achieve lasting change is to focus on practice rather than symbolic resolutions. Also, goals need to be well-defined and structured in such a way that can be achieved. This approach is feasible and effective approach.
