Successful businessman.

2. What was the competitive advantage of ---?

Ans "George Foreman Grill" had a competitive advantage over other such businesses, that its major advertising technique promoted in a sense family life and having fun rather than focusing on the product itself. The unique advertising strategy of Foreman's cooking burgers with his family and his light-hearted nature rendered great competitive advantage to the business.

3. What would have happened if Foreman had ---?

Ans. It was a strategic business move of Foreman to sell the naming rights for a handsome amount. The competition had gone tough and other businesses were flourishing at a fast pace. His business had already reached the top and was on a way to its downfall. So it was the best time to sell it. Otherwise, Foreman would have been at loss.

4. What kind of contrasted and complementary ---?

Ans. The story evokes contrastive sentiments in the minds of the readers. There is a contrast between 'glory' and 'lowliness.' Both are part of life just as experienced by Foreman. The sentiment of 'hopefulness' and 'consistency' is depicted. A person may be 'loved and supported' by people at one time and 'criticized' at another. Similarly, a decision is 'right' or 'wrong' depending upon the circumstances.

5. How far is the text successful to present ---?

Ans. The text successfully presented the true picture of Foreman and his struggle. The journey of life and struggle leaves both positive and negative impacts on the life of a person. Both are depicted in a clear and precise manner. Yet, a person could not be hopeful all time. He/she cannot be insensitive to the negative criticism. This could have been added.
