Questions

Q-1

The primary reason why most people fail to keep their New Year resolutions is that, they approach the wrong goals. New Year's resolutions are often rooted in impulsive desires or societal pressures, rather than genuine, long-term commitments. This impulsive nature makes it easy to abandon them when the going gets tough. Additionally, resolutions are typically vague and broad, making it difficult to track progress or measure success.

Resolutions tend to be ineffective even though people are highly motivated at the start of the year because, they set goals that are idealistic and not fully aligned with their everyday responsibilities, leaving them feeling overwhelmed. So, despite the best intentions, these resolutions are rarely sustained.

Q~3

The deep psychological factor indicates that, the start of a new year offers a symbolic opportunity to hit the reset button, to start fresh. This feeling of a clean slate fuels hope, even though the underlying reasons often remain the same. So, most people abandon them within weeks or months. However, the cycle continues because the New Year represents a chance for reinvention.

Q~4

More effective approach to achieve lasting change instead of making New Year resolutions is that; individuals need to shift their focus from symbolic resolutions to practical, well-defined goals that align with their personal values and are structured around achievable steps. Only then can lasting change be achieved.
