PRECIS :

The Ripple Effect of Corruption

Corruption : Path to Destruction

Small acts of corruption whether bribe or minor violation of rule over temporary advantage destroys the social fabric of society. It creates a normalized culture harming the standing values like honesty, trust and fairness. Corruption hinders the progress and development of society by diverting public resources and suppressing merit. It further leads to inequality and resentment among various bodies of the society. Thus, individuals must collectively follow the principle of integrity by understanding that even a small act of corruption leads to destructive consequences especially in long-term.

COMPREHENSION :

Answer 1 :

Every year brings with it a diverse range of 'New Year Resolutions' for every individual such as; to quit bad habits, to have a trip, to be productive daily and much more. The resolutions vary from person - to - person but most people fail to keep their NYR is they set idealistic goals to carry out and there is a continuous imbalance between resolutions and everyday tasks. The inability to sustain those goals and resolutions creates overwhelmed feelings.

Answer 2 :

New Year Resolution tends to be ineffective even some people are highly motivated is that every new and fresh beginnings brings with it a momentum and flow of energy. The initial energy and enthusiasm never tends to be fruitful because they / it is unrealistic and the desired approach to carry them out is wrong. These resolutions are not aligned with their own.

capabilities rather dependent on peer and societal expectations.

Answer 3 :

The human psychology plays a very significant role in coordinating to its goals and actions. People who fail to achieve NYR but still continue to make every year is because they believe that every new days brings new life and a new life hope. The human nature for renewal is always present as a symbolic opportunity, that adds the element of hope to the new state of New Year everytime.

Answer 4 :

The effective approach to achieve a long-lasting change is the mind and approach shift of individuals instead of making NYR. This could be done by self-realization ; by analyzing and viewing themselves on realistic, practical and structured grounds. And also by making well-defined goals that align with their personal interests. This is how lasting change is achieved by individuals.
