QUESTION #01

(Precis)

Corruption is an anathema to a stable society

Corruption in any form is a curse for a sustainable society. It destroys the core foundations of a society. Minute acts of corruption from higher echelons produce a cascading effect where everyone starts to justify one's corrupt acts as normal and fair. However, these small acts dent the moral fabric of a society. As corruption drains away all the welfare resources, so it impedes the progress of a society. Moreover, it sets a wrong precedent to emerge amateur instead of skilled professionals.

Hence, an environment of paranoia prevails which in turn breeds a criminal society. Thus, corruption brings destruction to socio-economic and political realms. As society is the name of collectiveness, so, it is important for everyone to hold oneself accountable for any kind of illegal act in order to build an egalitarian world.
