Questions:-

Q 3 1):-

What were the reasons behind
..... business?

Ans 3 1):-

The following are some of the reasons behind Foreman's transition to business. First, his reinvention made him understand that is real success comes only by using the fame wisely. In other words, his authenticity brought him an unexpected business opportunity. Secondly, a grill company offered him an advertising contract of a grill which wasn't selling. So Foreman came up with a brilliant strategy by rebranding the product and earning profit from this opportunity.

Q 3 2):-

What was the competitive advantage of the ----- Grill?

Ans Q 3 2):-

The competitive advantage included a 40% share of profits to be given by the grill company to George Foreman as a result of his advertising a non-selling grill. Because of this commercial, millions of grills were sold countrywide which in return earned him over $7 million per month in royalties.

Q 3 3):-

What would have happened if rights?

Ans Q 3 3):-

If he would not have sold the name rights, chances were there that he might face some ~~big~~ business losses in future. Or ~~even~~ it could lead to ~~big~~ financial ~~bankruptcy~~. Or even lose his share to another ~~emero~~ leading companies. It was the time, he realized that the market was getting competitive and saturated. So overall, selling his name rights was a calculated step in his career.

Q 3 4):-

What Kind of contrasted story?

Ans Q 3 4):-

First, he announced his retirement but then joined the ring again as a boxer due to financial restraints. Second, in past Foreman was known as an old and a menacing boxer but the next time he reinvented himself and proved to be a cheerful person which made people love him. Although he was considered old still he knocked a heavyweight champion who was 19 years younger than him. Third, because of his cheerful personality a company offered him a commercial. At this moment, his Unexpected demand of 40% share in profits was contradictory to his family oriented personality. Even later on, when later on, his selling of such a successful business reflects his ~~the~~ contradicting contrasting attitude (of eagerness to join a business) and complementary sentiments (the same eagerness of going out of business. In other words, his calculated step of going to get in and get out of business shows the contrasting and complementary sentiments of his personality.

Q 3 5):-
How far is the text successful
..... struggle?

Ans Q 3 5):-
In my view, the text is very successful in presenting the life of Foreman. It is a biography which has used a simple and an elegant language in a chronological order. Also, both the positive and negative aspects of Foreman's life are presented in a very balanced manner. The writer's use of narrative tone is commendable.
