Comprehension Writing:-

Answers

(1)

Foreman transitioned from boxing to business due to a combination of circumstances and opportunities. After losing his fortune through his bad decisions, he returned to the boxing ring and re-established his fame. His authentic and warm personality caught public attention, making him appealing beyond boxing. This led to a business opportunity with the George Foreman Grill, which he embraced, leveraging his fame and relatability.

(2)

The George Foreman Grill had a unique design that allowed grease to drain off one side, making food healthier. Additionally, Foreman's branding and marketing strategy were key advantages. His commercials emphasized family and fun, resonating with a broad audience.

(3)

If Foreman had not sold the naming rights, he might have continued earning significant royalties in the short term. However, as competition increased and the market became saturated, the product's profitability could have declined. By selling the rights at the peak of the grill's success, Foreman ensured a massive financial gain without the risk of diminishing returns.

(4)

Contrasted Sediments: The story evokes a sense of despair and failure during Foreman's financial downfall and initial struggles, contrasted with the triumph and resilience as he reinvents himself. His critics mocked him as "too old," but he proved them wrong by reclaiming the heavy weight and achieving unprecedented success.

Complementary Sediments: The story combines inspiration and admiration for Foreman's ability to overcome obstacles with warmth and reliability through his connection with family, fans and the viewers. His transformation from a fierce boxer to a cheerful entrepreneur showcases adaptability and determination.

(5)

The text is highly successful in presenting the true picture of Foreman and his struggles achievements. It highlights key phases of his life: his initial success in boxing, financial downfall, reinvention and eventual triumphs in both sports and business. It portrays Foreman not just as a boxer, but as a multidimensional individual who leveraged resilience, authenticity, and smart decision-making to achieve enduring success. The inclusion of personal details, such as his devotion to family and his preacher role, adds depth to his story, making it relatable and inspiring.

Translation:-

Once the thinker of Africa said, "When the British came to Africa, they had innovation, and we had the land. They claimed they were here to bring us development. We closed our eyes, and when we opened them, we had innovation, and they had our our land."

Similarly, when social networking science arrived, they had Facebook and WhatsApp. They said, it was free. We closed our eyes, and when we opened them, we had Facebook and WhatsApp, while they had our freedom and personal information. Therefore, whenever something is offered for free, we end up paying the price with our freedom.
