Comprehension

Question - 1;

According to the writer, most people, every year, vow to change their habits and to improve their lives, however, only few keep their promises. The primary reason behind why people change fail to keep their resolutions is that their vows are not genuine but are rooted in impulsive desires or societal pressure. These vows are idealistic and not fully aligned with their everyday task. Thus, resultantly, most of them fail to keep their promises in the long run.

13/11

Question-2;

The writer says in this paragraph that although people are highly motivated at the start of the year yet their resolutions tend to be ineffective. The main reasons behind this failure is that their resolutions are not realistic rather idealistic, triggered by societal pressure. These idealistic vows left people overwhelmed, and they abandon them when <sup>these</sup> ~~do~~ not align with their routines. Thus, regardless of their high motivation their resolutions tend to be ineffective.

Question-3;

According to the writer, the main psychological factor that keeps people making new year resolutions despite knowing they may fail is the desire of human mind for renewal. The start of a new year provides an opportunity to restart. and it allows people to take a fresh start of their lives.

This feeling provides a hopeful vision to most of the people, however they know that they may fail due to the same reasons, they failed last year.

Question-4;

The writer discusses in the paragraph that a more effective approach to achieve long-lasting change is to set well-defined and achievable goals. If people take rational approach is setting their goals which could align with their personal values than they can achieve what they desire. Thus, only ~~a~~ rational, well-structured and well-defined goals are more practically achievable than making some idealistic, vague vows to change their lives.

Precis

Title;

~~Small~~ Small Compromises
~~can~~ Leads to Systemic
Corruption

Precis;

Small acts of corruption are considered as harmless by many people. These people have no idea about its repercussions. The trivial acts altogether encourages a culture of corruption in society, which is a threat to justice. Accepting of bribe by one opens a way for other flagrant acts. This leads towards systemic corruption and thus allowing everyone to repudiate laws. Apart from it, these acts hinder growth and development of society. They allow inefficient ones to take seats on the expense of deserving ones. Furthermore, corruption promotes inequality. Law-abiding people become hopeless and chaos seems imminent in the society. Thus, even a small act of corruption can foster a destabilize future. Every act of each person count in the society. So it requires a collective effort to erode corruption from society.

:01
