The way Schengen countries reject visas to Pakistani citizens is similar to prepping for a buzzed event, only to be denied access for vague reasons. The visa application is like opening up to world about ~~dreams~~ ^{future} aspirations and receiving rejection, questioning the authenticity and intentions of the applicant. Meanwhile, Europeans seeking Pakistani visa are warmly welcomed to enjoy the ~~native~~ native culture and food, and to criticize it as well. Maybe Schengen countries feel Pakistani nationals will create havoc across Europe, overlooking that the ^{applicant's} energy is wasted paying and filing for the visa. If accepted, the rest of energy is used up wondering about the need to visit. Perhaps, Schengen citizens will feel the ordeal of Pakistani citizens, waiting in line for Pakistani visa.
