

Q1: Precise ::

Masses consider corruption as part of their society because a culture of small corrupt deeds has been in practice and these deeds are then normalized, that make them tolerant to larger crimes and corrupt practices. For example, a student getting the higher opportunity by cheating would be incompetent in his service.

Corruption suppress trust, integrity and hope in a society because everyone start thinking that justice can not be achieved. Everyone should hold themselves accountable for even the smaller actions because our decisions shape our society and a fair world is only possible through self accountability.
