

Q2

Introduction

As things stand, the Israeli genocidal campaign finds no major obstacles.

Fawaz Geergez

The Hamas-Israel confrontation has increasingly turned in the favour of Tel Aviv, with latter facing no significant resistance. The collapse of Assad in Damascus, along with decapitation of Hezbollah, means Tel Aviv could expand without provoking major tensions for itself. The answer aims to conduct highly researched analysis.

The growing fissures within axis of resistance has turned balance of power increasingly in the favour of Tel Aviv

Fissures

Syria has fallen: Assad is gone

Decapitation of Hezbollah

Iran is at its weakest moment

DATE: ___/___/___

The last year and half has exposed the vulnerabilities of Axis of resistance and Iran:

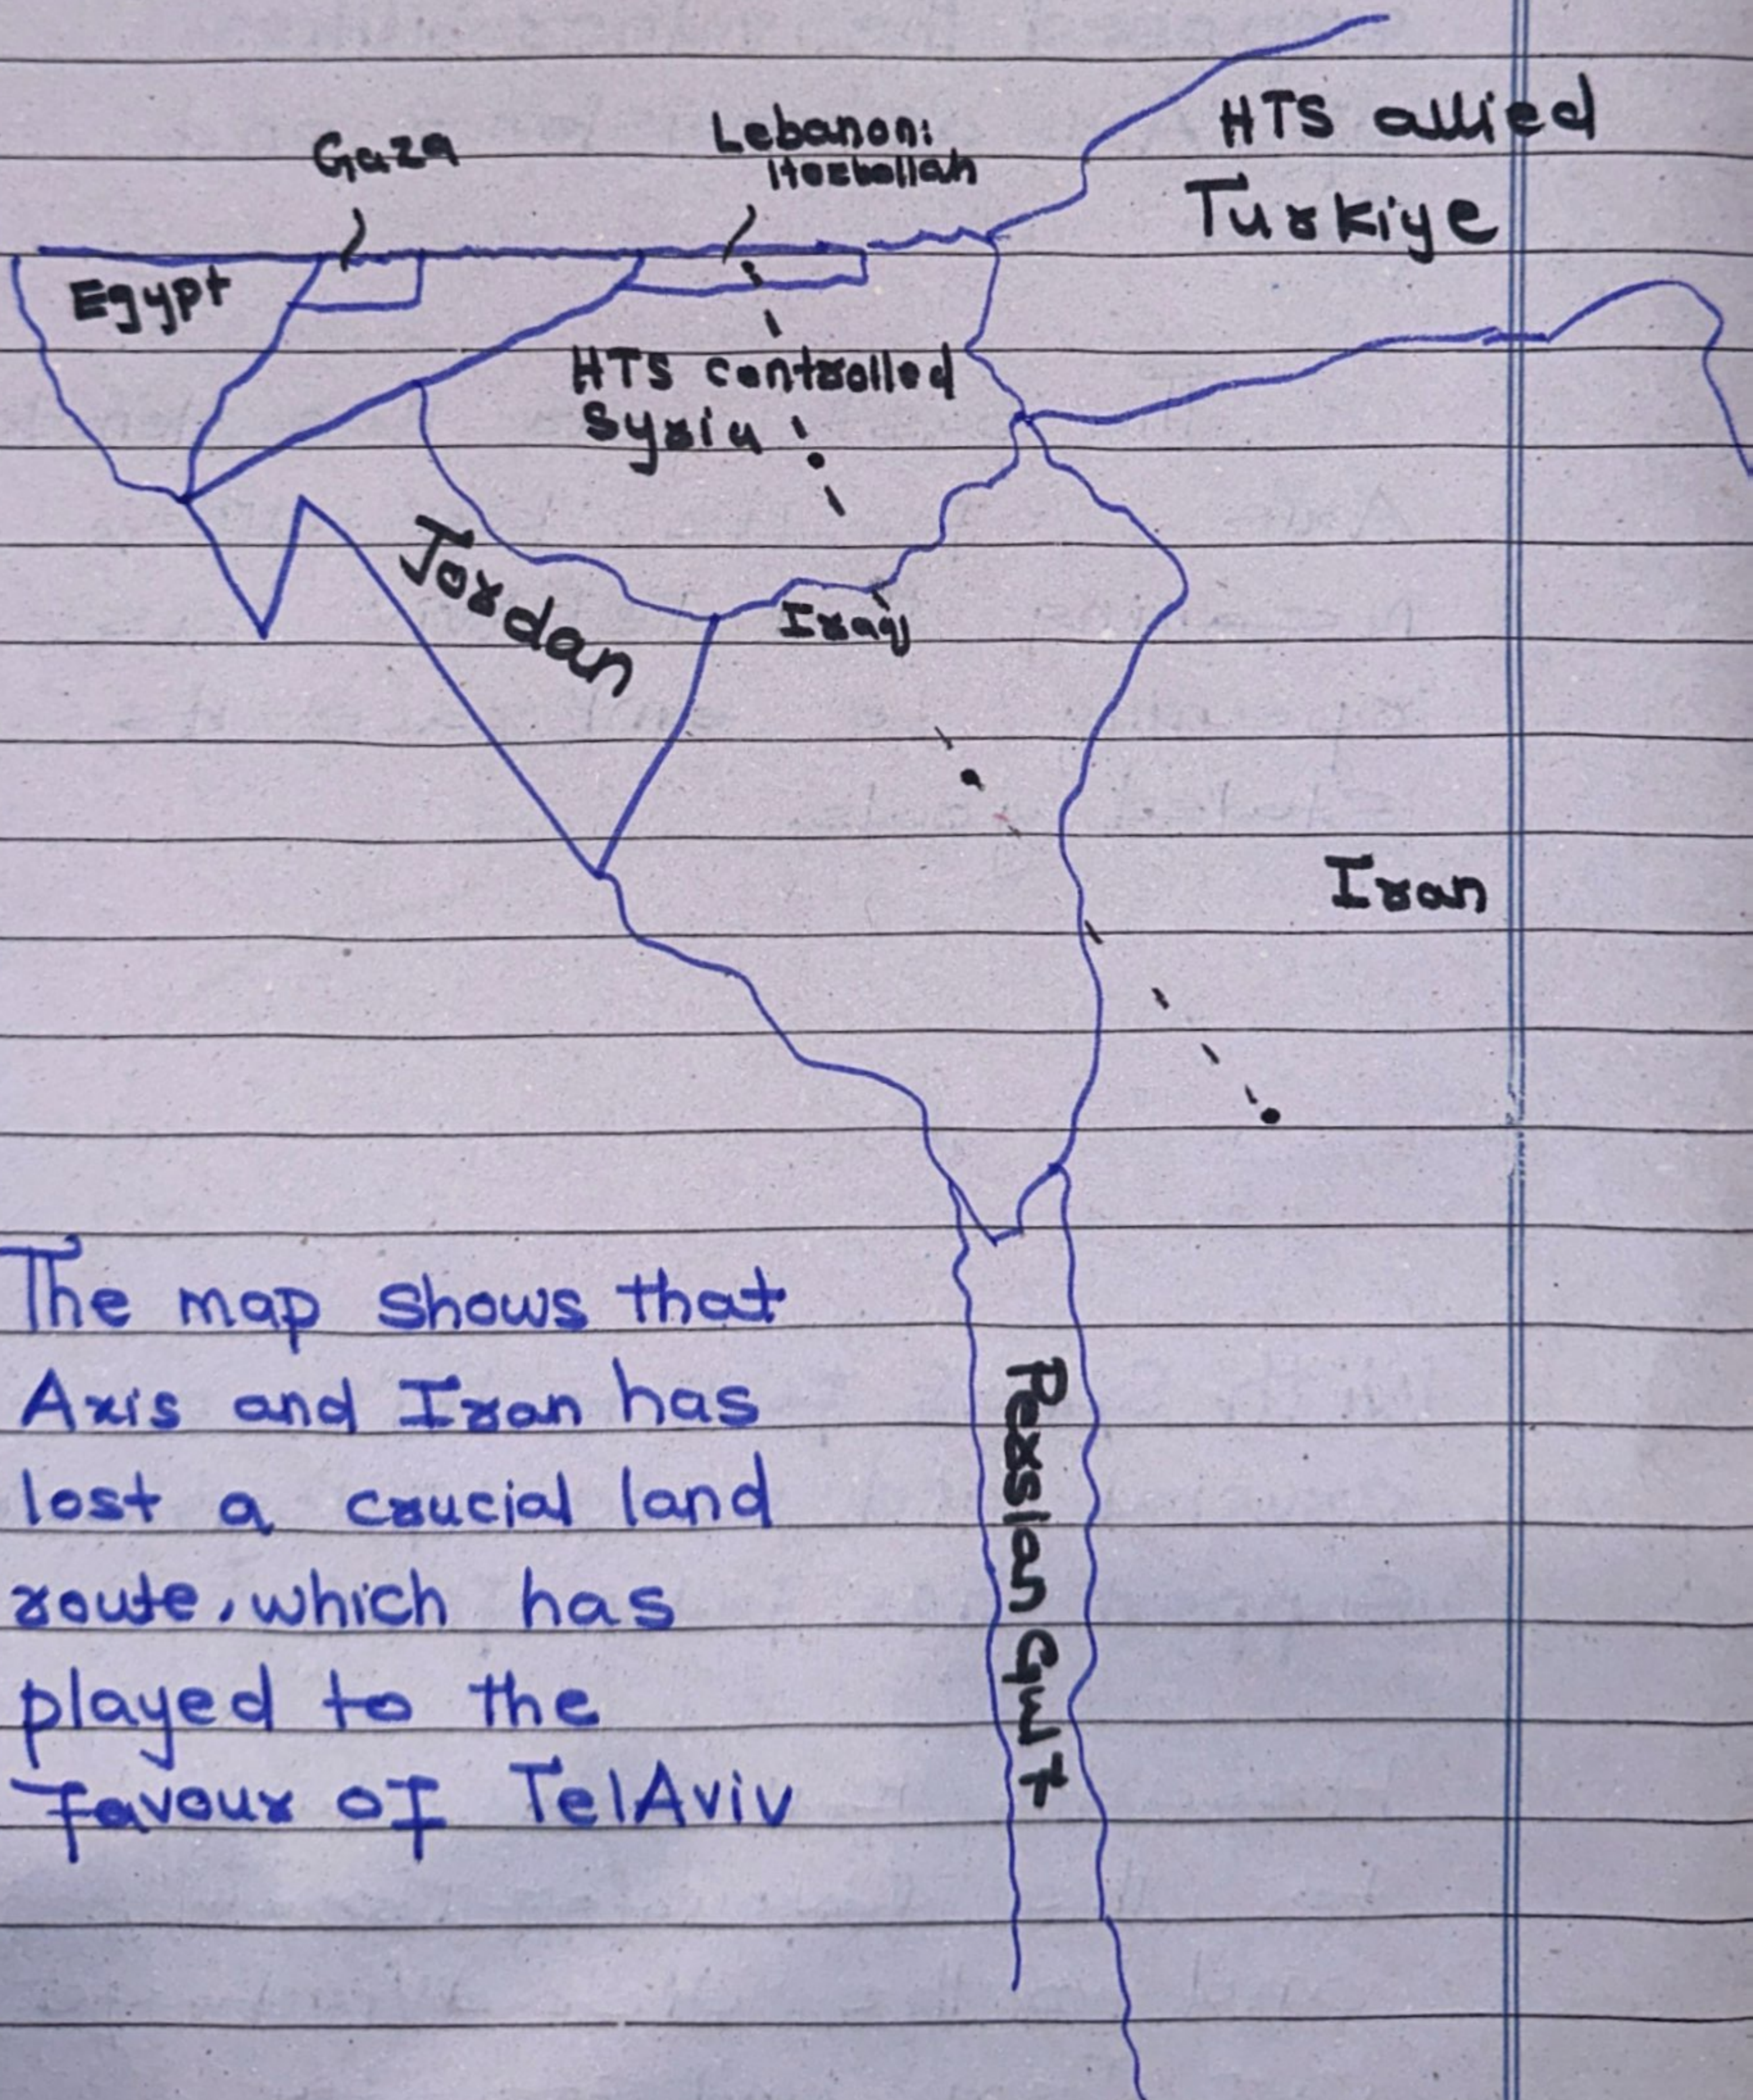

The past year has denuded Axis of its key allies, meaning that Tel Aviv has opening to embrace its stated goals.

With Syria's fall to HTS, a crucial land route of logistical support has fallen flat.

Assad's fall has played to the favour of Israel, and to the disadvantage of Iran and resistance movement

Regional map

The map shows that Axis and Iran has lost a crucial land route, which has played to the favour of Tel Aviv

Significant blows have also become a fate of Hezbollah, which has lost key senior leadership.

With Hezbollah crippled, Israel has acquired ability to expand the crisis in its favour, to secure a deal that could turn entire region its subservient. Israel would seize this opportunity with both hands.

Iran also remains at its weakest moment:

Not only in Levant, the regime change has threatened to unsettle the Iranian regime in South Caucasus.

Thus, against the backdrop of these developments, tensions would escalate, initially starting Tel Aviv.

The tensions are, thereby, likely to rise, initially starting the cause of Tel Aviv, which remains adamant to wipe out Iran and Palestine from the entire landscape.

With Tehran's Forward defense in tatters, a nuclear option seems possible.

If no peace prevails and tensions remain high, Tehran would eventually explore nuclear option.

DATE: ___/___/___

Such an outcome would invite scathing response from US and Israeli, threatening further tensions.

The option of going nuclear remains open for Tehran, given its growing vulnerabilities. However, Trump and Tel Aviv would take it a direct threat to national security, escalating tensions.

A Nuclear Iran risks overturning the frail Saudi Iran ^{or} rapprochement.

With the possibility of Iran acquiring a nuclear warhead, the tensions would spill out to threaten recently established Riyadh-Tehran peace. A curious mixture of tension could add new layers of complexities.

Critical Analysis:

Today, Israel may find itself stable as ever, given the developments in the region.

Yet, the axis has history of reviving itself from ashes.

Iran can explore Nuclear option and its allies could resuscitate itself. The war and tensions are likely to expand.

The only end is dialogue.

Israel seeks absolute ~~his~~ victory. There is none such in this world.

Conclusion:

Although Israel has scored crucial strategic victories, it is wishful thinking to conclude the conflict in Middle East would remain static.

The abrupt shift in balance of power would ultimately provoke unheard of reactions, counter moves, much to the detriment of peace. Things are likely to meet tragic fate, unless sanity prevails to keep Tel Aviv in check.

Q1:-

I Introduction:

The Zionist regime of Tel Aviv has refreshed the memories of Holocaust

Maleeha Lodhi, Pakistan's Former ambassador to US, UN and UK.

Following Hamas' Oct-7 attacks of retaliation, Israel has perpetuated grave crimes war, against humanity, in sharp violations of Genocide Convention. It has undertaken a extermination project aimed at wiping out of entire population of Palestinians. Although International Court of Justice (ICJ) has seen its actions constituting war crimes and crime against humanity, the lack of enforcement powers of the UN court meant Tel Aviv has literally no one to keep its action in action.

The US has long been its patron and ally, its reaction to ICJ ruling is consistent with its history. The answer aims to shed light on unfolding of a genocide.

Tel Aviv's extermination, annihilation project

▷ Destruction of Gaza

DATE: ___/___/___

Close to 46,000 people have been butchered, most among them are children and women.

UNRWA

The spectre of indiscriminate bombing:

Since Oct 7. Tel Aviv has consistently bombed innocent population of Palestine.

Children, women are particularly target, all in a bid to ^{create} greater Israel

Among top casualties are women and children who are targeted so that Palestinians may back off.

DATE: _ / _ / _

The entire infrastructure of Gaza lies in ruins:

Nothing remains in Gaza at this point in time.

The besieged state is all but rubble, all of this has happened under the watch of US and OIC.

Indeed, the response of ICJ is welcoming, but the UN court lacks the wherewithal to keep Tel Aviv in check

The response is a welcoming addition to the cause of Palestine, but it could hardly have the effect to draw peace and restore Palestine's natural rights.

DATE: ___/___/___

The US response to court ruling is consistent with its Israel oriented foreign Policy.

Following the court ruling, the US President manifested qualms. It was anything but surprising.

Tel Aviv enjoys bipartisan support in US; thus, its condemnation of UN court ruling is hardly surprising.

The bipartisan support in the US has allowed Tel Aviv to overcome any hurdle placed in its genocidal Campaign.

US-Arab relations

amidst Washington's relation of patronisation of Israel.

The US-Arab relations are stable and would remain likely the same.

The relations are normal and there remain no such big hurdle.

However, the Saudi-Israel detente has been pushed in a background for a while.

The detente has been forced to retreat for a while. Yet, the ultimate goal is to bring Riyadh and Tel Aviv closer and cordial.

DATE: ___/___/___

The return of Trump means Arabs would embrace the transaction relations with Washington

The return of Trump would suit the authoritarian monarchies. MBS and Sissi enjoy friendly terms. Israel would get a good deal.

To the downside, Arab streets are manifesting a ~~strong~~ strong disapproval of US

The only irritant to relation remains the Arab public's hostility towards Washington, in large part due to its unwavering support to Israel.

Critical Analysis:

The west dominated global order, along with its all arms, have lost its moral legitimacy.

The US remains complicit in furthering Israel's genocidal campaign, and OIC and Arab world remain deafening silent. It is tragic story.

The wider repercussions are grim.

Conclusion=

In a nutshell, Israel's genocidal program has found no resistance, though UN court has made its contribution, but to no avail. For US-Arab relations, they are likely to remain stable, only if Arab remain silent. Nothing damaging could pan out in near future.
