Question 2: Precis

Schengen Visa Bias Against Pakistanis
Title: Modern World Orientalism

Schengen countries are rejecting visa applications of Pakistani citizens, shattering their dreams, as if they were some conspiracists. The reasons often given are very inane. Conversely, if some Western citizen seeks Pakistani visa, we welcome them with open hands. They consider us a problem in Europe, but they need to understand that we are not some otherworldly creatures, rather humans. They might understand this when they will want Pakistani visa someday.

Question 3: Comprehension

Questions: 08/20

1) What were the reasons behind Foreman's transition from boxing to business?

After returning to boxing and reclaiming the heavyweight title Foreman transitioned from boxing to business, as he realized that the reason of his success is not being in the ring, rather being his true authentic self, who is loved and cheered by the people. He became a family man who brought his family together over burgers. His authentic self presented him with an unforeseen business opportunity, transitioning him from a boxer to a businessperson.

2) What was the competitive advantage of the George Foreman Grill?

George Foreman loved the unique design of the grill and suggested branding the grill as George Foreman Grill. He was a family man who brought together family over burgers. He recorded commercials featuring himself with his family-cooking burgers- emphasising family fun, more than the product itself. This strategy worked out perfectly and appealed to the audience, providing a competitive advantage to the George Foreman Grill.

3) What would have happened if Foreman had not sold the name rights?

The market was getting saturated with competitors at the time. Foreman made a smart move and sold the naming rights at the right time for a good amount of money. If he had not got out at the right time and had not sold the name rights, he might have lost everything with the increasing competition.

4) What kind of contrasted and complementary sentiments are evoked in this story?

This story of George Foreman evoked the contrasted and complementary sentiments of empathy, sadness, contentment, and admiration. The loss of foreman, causing him to retire evokes the empathy and sadness in the reader, followed by his loss of money. However, his comeback and success in boxing provided a sort of contentment. Lastly, his struggle and right decision at the end, makes the reader admire him for his wise decision.

5) How far is the text successful to present the true picture of Foreman and his struggle?

The intellectual of Africa once said that when Britishers came to Africa, they had technology and innovation. They said that they came here to provide them development opportunities. We trusted them blindly. When the blindfold came off our eyes, we had the technology and innovation, and they had our land. Similarly, when social media network came, they had Facebook and WhatsApp. They told us that it was free. We turned a blind eye and when the blindfold was removed, we had Facebook and WhatsApp, and they had our freedom and personal information. Therefore, when something is for free, we have to pay for it with our freedom!
