Question No. 2

For Pakistanis, Schengen visas are some of the hardest to obtain. The visa officer seems adamant on rejecting our applications. Often, he cites reasons such as 'suspicious bank balance' or 'bad intentions' as the main culprits. On the other hand, if Europeans apply for a visa, we give them the royal treatment. Europeans believe we might cause a rocker, while forgetting most of our energy is spent during application stage. Maybe, if

An African philosopher once remarked, "when the British came to Africa, they brought innovation along with themselves and told us that we are here to help ^{you} progress; all the while, we only had our land. We believed them and trusted their words; only to find out, that we had traded our land for their innovation." He goes on to say, "Similarly, when these social media came to the limelight, Facebook and WhatsApp were pitched as free. Later on, we learned that they had our personal data and freedom." Hence, whenever something is pitched as free, there is always a hidden cost attached to it, in order to, to obtain it. That cost is freedom.
