Question #7

02/10

Once upon a time, ^{An} African philosopher said that, when ~~Britishers~~ came into Africa, they had innovation. We had land. They said that they had come to help in development. We trusted themselves without knowing anything. But when we realized that they had land and we had innovation. When social network sites ^{invented} introduced, they both had facebook and whatsapp. They said that, these sites ~~were~~ free and again we were victim of their controversy.

When we realized then they had our independence and personal information.

So, when things are freely available, all the time we pay the price in the form of giving independence.

whenever something is free, we end up paying for it with our freedom.
