In the past, it was believed that women are emotional and have lack of decision making power due to biological hormonal imbalance. However, their attitude have shifted but science proves that women empowering is beneficial for the world. Because they experience the life differently, and leads to less violence, more peace and stronger economies. The American ex-president Obama said that,

"If more women were put in charge, there would be less war, kids would be better taken care of and there would be improving in living standards and outcomes."

Women think in different ways. female leaders donot necessarily rule in a distinct manner. they would make the world in a better place.

we can take many examples from history that women empowering is better than men. world shows that women empowering leads to positive outcomes.

→ When women ruling<sup>m</sup> the world they shaping the world that bring a Unique perspective that consider the long term consequences for future generation- women recognize the importance of peaceful and stable environment for the well-being of the societies. women leader advocate for gender equality not only for themselves. also for future generation- Their commitment to peace, equality, education to more sustainable world.

There are many examples in the history when women rule and the world looks in the better position. The ~~case~~ Queen Elizabeth ruling across the Europe and ~~the~~ Benazir Bhutto empowering in Pakistan They give lesson to new generation that women can also empower and ruling the world. They pave the way for brighter futures for generations to come.

Women's empowerment <sup>also</sup> plays a vital role in decision making and effective governance. women leaders can improve social welfare, healthcare and education. Their participation in decision making positively impacts climate policies. ~~the~~ countries with higher women's representation in parliments adopt ~~more~~ climate change policies.

Due to women's empowerment, women's have equal rights like men - women's empowerment in decision making not only promotes gender equality but also contributes to more effective governance.

In Ancient times, women empowering in Egypt is another example. ~~the~~ In ancient world, female rulers were rare - but Thousands of years ago, <sup>when</sup> Egypt was in political crises. it was a risky option to place a women in power. so, In the first dynasty, Queen merneith, after the death of her husband. stepped into power on behalf of her son - and focus on the protection of children. women's often ~~take~~ lead differently than men.

Research shows that female leaders tend to exhibit more transformational leadership styles.
They create environment where everyone's voice is heard. women leaders are authentic and practical. women's leadership styles contributes positively to productivity, collaboration and organizational success. Business is more profitable. Governments are more representative. Families are stronger and communities are healthier. There is less violence, less wars, and more peace in the world.

Powerful women have strength to take risks, learn from failures, deal with remarks, insults or stereotypes. but never give up no matter how hard a challenge is. Female leaders should be prepared to face the society biases. They cannot take help from for wrong advice from others. Powerful women know how to ask for what they want and need to be successful. Women in leadership positions often face certain challenges that men ~~at~~ never will.

Research shows that women empowering ~~is~~ leads to better ~~is~~ business outcomes. and has ~~been~~ far reaching positive effects on economies and societies. Like IMF consistently emphasizes the benefits of gender equality. Empowering women leads to greater productivity and financial stability. and other one, Economic freedom serves as the foundation for empowering women with more opportunities. when women have the freedom with more to participate creatively and freely in the market place, economic growth follows. Empowering women isn't just a matter of social justice - It's an essential driver of economic prosperity. By promoting gender equality, we unlock immense potential for growth and well-being - and when women have cash they spend money on different sectors. like health, education, transport, and other-where needed. They can also save money. As a huge and growing body of research and experience makes clear, empowering women makes things better - not perfect but better. Studies show that higher numbers of women in parliament generally contribute to stronger attention to women's issues - women's often advocate for legislation that promotes women rights, children rights. and the interests of local communities. women's participation in decision making has a profound impact on society, benefiting not only women themselves but also everyone - they make policies for women's rights, women's health issues, women's education - women constitute half of the ~~society~~ world's population and their voices in politics ensures that their voices are heard and their rights protected.

Men and women often bring different collaboration strengths to the table. Research suggests that women tend to be more risk-averse, which can be beneficial in decision making.

Both men and women can learn from each other's approaches - Encouraging dialogues and mutual understanding fosters growth and innovation - Men tend to make more extreme choices and decisions than women. They can be very selfish, on the other hand women exhibit a moderate range of behaviour. Women's are often perceived better listner than men - Recognizing and valuing the unique qualities that men and women bring to Public life is critical. Rather than expecting women to Think and act like a men, their differences should be seen as a source of strength -

According to APA, US site, when more women are empowered. to lead everyone benefits, Decades of studies show women leaders help increase productivity, enhance collaboration, inspire organizational dedication and improve fairness.

concluding that, world would be a better place if women held leadership positions - Their qualities of selflessness, ambition, and peacefulness contribute to making homes, nations, and the world itself more beautiful and accomodating for all. They are very hard workers, they know how to make policies, laws - etc - Research and experience shows that empowering women leads to positive outcomes in various sectors - So, it's time to consider that idea of women ruling the world as a source of strength.
