vii. Conclusion:

From the birth of universe to till-date, the human rights have been always been violated for the supremacy of any nation or the conflict winning. Unfortunately, the protection of human rights are frequently jeopardized during the conflicts because the priority is on conflict-winning. However, there must be important methodologies followed regarding the protection of human rights. In addition, millions of people have lost their lives during the major conflicts. Additionally, there are immense causes of human rights violation during the conflicts. For instance, the states prioritize the security over individual's freedom; using the resources of people in the conflict and they impose the martial law. And in this way, human rights are compromised and violated during the conflict. However, they are worst implication of human rights violation. For instance, disturbance of education, healthcare facilities and massive loss of public infrastructure. Additionally, the violation of human rights during the conflicts are leading to radicalization and extremism. However, the states and international organizations should ensure the human rights during the conflicts. For instance, restriction on the violation of human rights, and ban on the use of chemical weapons on public. However, undeniably, human rights are the first casualty in any conflict for the conflict-winning. However, the human rights must be ensured otherwise it will engulf the world by inviting the more human rights violation.

To begin with, according to the Universal Human Rights Declaration, there are immense human rights. For instance, freedom of speech, protection of their liberty and property, right to choose the leader, provide them education and healthcare facilities and many more. But one can not deny that human has immense right but human rights are ensured or not it depends on the state and the international organizations. However, the aforementioned are the basic human rights.

Moving on, there are immense on-going conflicts around the world. Such as, Israel-Palestine conflict, Syrian civil war, Yaman civil war, Ukraine-Russia conflict and many more. In these on-going conflicts, human rights are violated very badly. In recent, Israel-Gaza war, 22000 to 24000 palestinians have been killed by hard Israel. Additionally, hundreds of Ukrainian people have been killed. So, it shows that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Furthermore, there are immense cause of human rights violation in any conflict. For instance, the states prioritize the security over an individual's freedom for a conflict-winning. North Korea and Russia are one of them. In North Korea has a dictator dictatorship ruler, they are making offensive weapons and violating the rights of their own people. So, it depicts that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict. Similarly, during any conflict, the public resources of economy are being used by the State in the conflict. It is true that any conflicts will affect the resources of people. For instance, Iraq is a rich country by the natural resources but their people have not any kind of facility because their resources are used by foreign powers. So, it denotes clearly that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Moreover when any conflict starts, the both sides of trade route is blockade blocked. Recently, Israel has blocked the water route of Gaza. Million of Palestinian people are suffering due to this blockade. Indeed, it is a grave violation of human rights. Beside this Israel has blocked trade routes and supply. Hence, it is true that human rights violation are the first casualty in any conflict.

In the same way, in the conflicts both side of states target the public and using chemical weapons on them. Recently, Israel has targeted the innocent people of Palestine and used chemical weapon on them causing thousands of people have lost their precious life. Sadly, it is worst human rights violation. Same as Russia is doing the Ukrainian people. Therefore, one can not deny that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Moreover, the imposing martial law is very common during the any conflict because the states prioritize their security over the rights of people. During the Afghan war, Pakistan has imposed martial law. Same as in Myanmar.

This martial law has grave implication on human rights. Their voices have no value, their freedom of speech is banned and many more. Hence, it is proving that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Shifting from causes to the grave implications, undeniably, the education and healthcare system are first impacted. Conflict brings restriction in education. People are not allowed to go to schools and colleges. The

The everlasting lockdown in Kashmir, the children have not seen the school and have not are not acquiring the education. Same as happening with the people of Gaza. Undoubtedly, the human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

In the same views, massive loss of public infrastructure in any conflict is common. The government and the public's infrastructures are targeted. Recently, immense buildings of Palestinian people have been damaged during the conflict. Same, Russia has also damaged the Ukrainian's buildings. Additionally, US had also damaged the infrastructure of Iraq very badly. Hence, it makes sure that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Similarly, conflicts bring with itself a storm of economic crises. As the history and today's world are evident that where there is a conflict and there will be economic crises. As on-going conflicts countries are severely the victim of economic crises such as Syria, Iraq, Iran, Ukraine, Russia and many more. However, it is reality that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Beside this conflicts create hundreds of hurdles in the path of human development. Undoubtedly, the human development is compromised. As today's world, in Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, there is no human development. People are deprived of their basic needs. Hence, it is proving that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict.

Furthermore, conflicts make people compel to be part of radicalization and extremism. In conflicts, the opponent state start funding the separatist movement of the enemy state and use them as weapon. For instance, India supports Baloch Liberation Army (BLA). These terrorist groups give huge loss to their own country. So, it shows that violation of human rights have grave implications.

Moving on the suggestions.

Firstly, for stopping the violation of human rights during any conflict, the global powers and international organization should enforce their mandates of human rights around the world. Those nations violates human rights in the conflict and they will be imposed by ~~the~~ hard sanctions. Indeed, restriction on violation of human rights can protect the human rights.

Secondly, the conflicts should be resolved peacefully. For instance, Israel-Palestinian conflict should be resolved in accordance with two state solution. Same as Kashmir issue should be resolved in accordance with will of people. However, there is no way for ending the conflict without a peaceful resolution. Hence, resolving the conflict in a peaceful way can ensure the human rights.

Thirdly, international organizations should ensure the human rights during any conflict. UN should make effective its role in the globe regarding human rights. Additionally, International Court of Justice (ICJ) should resolve the territorial conflicts fairly so that human rights must be ensured. Undeniably, once international organization has ensured its role then the human rights will be protected.

Last but not least, using chemical weapons on public is very common during the conflict. It is proved resulted in thousand people loss casualties. However, the peace making organization and superpowers should ban on the use of chemical weapons. Indeed, to ban on the use of chemical weapons can ensure the human rights.

To conclude, sadly, the protection of human rights are frequently jeopardized during the conflicts. Millions of people have lost their lives in the conflicts. States prioritize the security without caring the human rights. In conflicts, people face the martial laws and their democratic rights are compromised. However, there are grave implication of human rights violation. For instance, the ~~dis~~ disturbance of education and healthcare sector.

Additionally, the states face massive infrastructure loss and economic crises.

However, the global powers and international organizations should ensure their role regarding human rights.

However, it is proved that human rights are the first casualty in any conflict because states prefer conflict winning but with effort of global powers and international organizations, human rights can be ensured and protected.
