Q7.) Transition:

All the degrees would be useless in the next three years. The pace of technology and the desire to benefit from it is so swift that our former information, its sources and even the curriculum and subjects are getting irrelevant. When every sort of information is available at the mere tap of phone screen, that is when the skill overpowers the knowledge and action precedes the thought. We are faced with the dilemma that in the coming days, how - the storytellers would convince - the listeners with their rhetoric. And how the teachers would teach the principles of wisdom to the technological savvy students in a small class room.
