ANSWER:

Hiroo Onoda, a Japanese intelligence officer, considered as a symbol of strength and loyalty because he had given an exceptional performance during WWII. He was a very dedicated and resilient officer because he remained fighting on warfare even after the three decades of WWII. This is because he did not find about the end of the war <sup>and</sup> <sup>and</sup> <sup>surrender of</sup> Japan. he also did not get any orders to stop due to communication gap. Therefore this dedication and loyalty towards his country made him a renowned figure and gave him a symbol of strength and loyalty.

Q NO: 2

ANSWER

Hiroo Onada was sent to the island of Phillipines: Lubang Island. He was sent there with orders to disrupt and disarrange the workings of enemy, so they would not make it. He also got specific instructions regarding the war techniques. He was instructed to put guerrilla warfare in order to make the enemy in extreme trouble. However, Hiroo Onada gave his best possible efforts during war.

Q NO: 3

ANSWER

The Hiroo Onada and his unit was unaware of Japan's surrender in 1945 because of communication gap. He was in a dense jungle with his unit for operation so, the messages they got were not properly broadcasted by them so there was a skepticism regarding the end of war. However this isolation made them unaware of the contemporary decisions therefore, Hiroo Onada and his unit remained isolated and unaware.

Q NO: 4
ANSWER

The efforts made by Japan government towards Hiroo Onoda and his Unit for contacting and to let them know about the end of war and surrender of Japan were through messages which were given to Phillipine government. As those messages were broadcasted by Phillipine government and Hiroo Onoda had doubts on them, so it causes the efforts to be unsuccessful. This skepticism of the soldiers made them unaware of the current situation of that time.

Q NO: 5
ANSWER

Norio Suzuki, a young adventures, assigned to find the lieutenant Onoda to his mission to Lubang island. He went to the jungle and found the hiding spot of Onoda and he told him about the end of war 1945. But as expected, Hiroo Onoda was suspicious and asked him to give orders by high commanding officers. Norio Suzuki found this very challenging because he had to sought the confirmation from high commanding officers. So, he sent the former officer to Japan and wanted to take orders from them to Onoda for end of war.
