Bill Clinton walked into a Karachi restaurant and asked the waiter, "Do you have biryani?" The waiter grinned, "Of course, sir. Our biryani is so good, it will make you forget your own name!" Bill laughed, "I hope not! I need that for Imran!" Later, during a power outage, Imran quipped, "In Pakistan, we don't need candles, our biryani alone can light up the room!" Bill replied, "True, and if you add some spicy chutney, we might even have a disco party!" They both chuckled, realizing that in Pakistan, humor and hospitality go hand in hand, making every meal an unforgettable experience.

~~In a conversation, Heer~~

During a conversation, Heer asked Ranjha that where he had been and told him that she really missed him. In reply, Ranjha told her about his travel and the same feelings as she had.

When Ranjha asked her about, she sadly told him that she was lonely but interested to know his journey. Ranjha told her about his journey of self-discovery but consoled him that she remained in her thoughts. Upon asking about the journey's learning, Ranjha told her that he learned the value of struggle and strength. Heer told him that she was really missing him but Ranjha was more concerned about the success.

Heer was more concerned about their meet-up and ready to enjoy but Ranjha refused to stay because of upcoming exams and left her by saying that his success would conquer distance and time.

Q NO 7:      Translation.

All the degrees are going to be useless in the next three years. The speed of technology and willingness to use it is good enough to overcome our previous knowledge; even our syllabus and subjects are going to be irrelevant. When every information is available just a click away then skills prevail knowledge and action takes precedence over thought. It's a great apprehension that how religious orators will be able to inspire their listeners and how teachers will ~~be able to~~ explain the technicalities of universe to students, who have 24/7 access to internet, in a small classroom.

Comprehension Passage

① Hiroo Onoda was a Japanese intelligence officer during World War-II and he is considered as a symbol of strength and loyalty because of his resilience and faithfully following the orders of his seniors for almost 30 years. He set an example of courage and determination.

② During the World War II, Onoda was sent to Lubang Island in Philippines as an intelligence officer. He had given the orders to disrupt enemy operation by using and engaging in guerilla tactics.

③ The World War-II had ended in 1945 when the situation went against Japanese but Onoda and his unit remain unaware of the loss of surrender because of the communication and contacts with their army. They continued to be engaged in the war from their side.

(4) Many efforts were made to inform Onoda and his army about the end of the war - letters were sent news were broadcasted but all in vain. Even they receive the messages but did not trust and considered them as some trick of the enemies.

(5) Norio Suzuki was a young adventurer and he voluntarily started a mission to find "Lieutenant Onoda" in ~~the~~ Lubang Island. Luckily, he found Onoda's abode but he faced difficulty in convincing Onoda about the defeat of Japan and end of war. Onoda asked the confirmation from senior officers as well. Onoda's resilience, loyalty, steadfastness and enduring testament were challenges to convince him about war's end.

Respect of the State Institutions

There are three basic state institutions also known as pillars of the state. One of them is judiciary whose function is to interpret laws.

It is an independent institution.

Then comes legislative branch also known as voice of people, responsible for law-making. The third one is executive branch for law implementation. The coordination and cohesion of all three state institutions is the base of progress of a nation. The respect of the state institutions

is a fundamental duty of citizen but it is not a sole responsibility of citizen's social norms but also decided by the code and conduct of the leaders. We should recognize the importance of state institutions and play our role in their progress.
