

Q No: 2 Precis.

Title:

The importance of democratic institutions.

The respect of State's institutions is the outmost responsibility of the citizens. Judiciary is the first. It ensures the legal system of the state and ensures the justice in the state.

Secondly, the legislative: they are representatives of the people's voice, and they are primarily for democracy.

Thirdly, the executive branch, the executive ensures the law and order of the state and safeguards the life and property of the citizens.

However, the citizens must have the capacity to trust the institutions, because once institutions become strong, the overall governance structure will improve.

Additionally, they are fundamental pillars of democracy. Recognizing the significance of institutions is the responsibility of citizens for the betterment of the society.
