

Precis:

Title: Respecting State Institutions is the Cornerstone of Democracy

Respecting state institutions, including the judiciary, legislature, and executive, is crucial for a strong democracy. Each branch plays a vital role: the judiciary ensures justice, the legislature represents the people's voice, and the executive implements policies effectively. Citizens and leaders alike must uphold these institutions through their actions and contributions. Leaders, especially, set the tone through transparent governance, ethical decisions, and accountability. Ultimately, respecting state institutions is not just an obligation, but the foundation for a just, equal, and thriving nation.

Translation:

All degrees are about to become useless in the next three years. The speed of technology and the desire of its exploitation are fast enough to the extent that our previous knowledge, sources of information, and even curriculum and subjects - all are becoming irrelevant.

When all information is available on the screen of a mobile in hand, then skill dominates knowledge, and action leads ^{Preference} ~~thinking~~ over thinking. Now, it is feared, in the upcoming days, how will the story tellers on the pulpits unite their audience on their essence of speech? How will a teacher teach the intricate allegories of the universe to the students who are always busy in exploiting the internet.

Corrections:

① Hassan Ali Gondal would rather stay home than go to the polling station.
(parallelism)

② Advocate Malike Huzaiya always looks for inspiration. None ever comes. [subject-verb-agreement]

③ Money makes the more go.
[spelling]

④ I wish I could go back to earlier times.
[wish-takes → could → not "can"]

⑤ If there were no bad people, there wouldn't be good lawyers.
[conditional clause - with "were" takes "would" not "will"]

Prepositions:

(i) The cat jumped over the table and knocked over the vase.

(ii) The book is on the shelf, right next to the encyclopedia.

(iii) My brother sat next to me during the movie and shared his popcorn.

(iv) The kids played in the park until the sun went down.

(v) He hid the gift under the bed to surprise his sister later.

Punctuation:

Bill Clinton walked into a Karachi restaurant and asked the waiter, "Do you have Biryani?" The waiter grinned, "Of course, Sir. Our Biryani is so good. It will make you forget your own name!" Bill laughed, "I hope not! I need that for Imran!"

Later, during a power outage, Imran quipped, "In Pakistan, we don't need candles; our Biryani alone can light up the room!"

Bill replied, "True, if you add some spicy chutney, we might even have a disco party!"

They both chuckled, realizing that in Pakistan, humor and hospitality go hand in hand, making every meal unforgettable experience.