

THE DECLINE OF ORATORY

It is impossible to determine the future of oratory. The orators had much significance and worth for their remarkable works in ancient times. However, the significance and worth of the oratory and the art of public speaking has declined. The modern writings, the broadcasting of conversations, and the huge number of people speaking in different kinds of meetings have reduced the interest in ornate kind of speaking. Sir Winston Churchill is considered as one of the greatest orators of the ancient history. He has expressed himself in almost every national and international matter. His speeches are the best examples for ~~the~~ other human speeches. The speeches of Sir Winston Churchill will always remind about him who ~~was~~ ^{became} the most important figure of his time.

Precis: 148 words

Total: 470 words