

Q3 Write note on the Afghan War....?

1. Introduction:

The starting of Afghan war in 1979 has created serious impacts on Pakistan and it has to play its role unwillingly due to multiple reasons. These impacts are translated into the emergence of various socio-political ills in Pakistan which can also be observed till now. The Afghan War has changed the dynamics of the region and has impacted the culture of the region adversely for the decades to come. The security threats to Pakistan by Non-State Actors and Non-traditional threats are the 'blessings' of Afghan war, that has reshaped the geo-politics of the region.

2- Afghan War since 1979:

The Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan in 1979 for seeking its geo-political interests and installed a puppet regime in Kabul. The neighboring countries and Saudi Arabia and the US

Supported their freedom struggle against the Soviets. As this was seen as a threat to the stability of the region by communist expansion. It was also seen as a threat to Pakistan if communist troops permanently stationed in Afghanistan so it naturally forced Pakistan to become part of International support against Soviets to avoid existential threat from Soviets. By these collaborated effort Soviets not only withdrew but also helped Pakistan to build better relations with Afghanistan. After withdrawal it faded the US interest in the region and lead to rising internal rifts in Afghanistan. This created hard liners terrorists in the region.

3- Impacts of Afghan War on Pakistan:

The participation in Afghan war has impacted Pakistan to a great extent

(i) Cultural Change in Pakistan:

The Afghan war has contributed in change of culture in Pakistan as well along with Afghanistan itself. The society changed its discourse and resort to violent behaviour in conflict resolution.

(ii) Strengthening of Non-Democratic Regime:

This war created opportunity for a non-democratic authoritarian leader to gain strengthen from US aid by becoming its ally. Because in democratic regime it will be difficult for US to gain support of Pakistan easily.

(iii) Emergence of Non-State Actors:

The war on the backyard of Pakistan has definitely some effects on the country as well in the of emergence of non-state actors that resort to extreme and violent action to fulfil their agenda at any cost because of the Afghan war experience.

(iv) Rising Non-Traditional Security threats in Pakistan:

The rise of non-state actors and their exercise of power to blackmail state has weakened the state. This has lead to another challenge of rising of traditional security threat in Pakistan. The resources and energy of state was exhausted to a great extent by Non-state actors and state has left with limited resources to deal with the non-traditional security threats like climate change, population explosion, food security and water scarcity.

4- Critical Analysis:

The participation in Afghan war though was compulsive choice but has adverse affects that can also be traced now-a-days. This further lead to the emergence of power groups other than the state due to availability of weapon to fight with Soviets. This course changed the culture of the society from peaceful to violent actors. Pakistan has suffered badly and its resources were exhausted and it became weak against non-traditional challenges.

5- Conclusions

Afghan war has changed the discourse of the region and impacted the relationships of the neighbours. The culture of Pakistan has changed adversely as a fall out of this war.
