6. Conclusion

"It takes courage and strength to be empathetic, and I am very proudly an empathetic and compassionate leader" (Jacinda Ardern). It indicates the qualities of a good leader and ultimately under an efficient leadership, the world can become a better place. Although there are some tactics of making the world better, no matter the women are on driving seat or a man. However, women prove themselves efficient for this position. Hence, the world can improve if women ruled the world. Historically, there are some factors of women leadership that improve the world. Education and employment are flourished during the reign of females. Due to improvement in these two elements, poverty is reduced. Moreover, females discourage the culture of corruption and believe on meritocracy. Women being a humble creature, avoid wars and promote peace in the world. Furthermore, they discourage the root of all evils that is gender discrimination. Hence, gender equality can be turned into reality, if females are on driving seat. On the other hand, male can do better for the world like they introduced STEM program for skilled education. They also support financially to the masses through financial support programs. Corruption controlled agencies are also an initiative of men. Men leadership gives opportunities to women through quota system. Despite all these elements, women can rule the world betterly than men. For instance STEM program that introduced by men is useless because mostly people unaware from this opportunity. Moreover, corruption is flourished in the reign of men. Similarly, the patriarchal society discourages the working women. In a nut shell, women can play better on the pitch of leadership for the improvement of this world.

History observes the role of women in leadership is an extraordinary. They serve better as compared to men. There are many examples of female leaders who took part in the betterment of the world. For instance, the most prominent personalities are Jacinda Ardern, Margaret Thatcher, Angela Merkel etc. Apart from these many more women did better for the world. In this way, the women can run the world betterly than men.
