

Question 3

Introduction:

OIC was created with the primary objective of representation of Muslims around the world and ensuring that the sanctity of Muslim lives were upheld everywhere. It was made to act as a platform of brotherhood and unity of Muslim Ummah. Both internal and external factors have crippled it, making it unable to perform both tasks. Contemporary challenges and accomplishments may give it an opportunity to free itself from various chains but the willingness to act must be there. Following details clarify whether or not it can prove to be a successful organization in present times.

Contemporary Issues and chances of OIC's Success

Relate your headings to the qs statement

Contemporary international society seems to be more demanding of OIC in terms of its performance. OIC, on many accounts, has failed to fulfill the purpose it was created to achieve but current developments may prove to be the trigger that enables it to become successful.

Short and incomplete answer. A 20 marks answer should have around 15 arguments and be on 8-9 pages

Conclusion:

OIC being a makeup of 55 countries has on previous occasion failed to represent the muslims. It rather represents the states and their inclination towards economy and power politics. Until and unless the Muslim leaders decide to put OIC to the use it was intended to no other event can make it successful in representing the Muslim world.
