Q7) Translate the following all educational degrees would be futile

All degrees ~~are going to become futile in the~~ ~~next three years.~~ The pace of technology and the urge to turn it to profitable accounts is fast to this degree that our previous information sources of information and even the syllabus and subjects ~~are all becoming~~ irrelevant. When every type of information becomes readily available at the palm of the hand, then skill dominates knowledge and action supercedes opinion. The current apprehension is that in the coming days, how the story tellers on the pulpits will catch their listeners' eye undiverted. And how the teachers will make the students understand the mysteries of universe ^{in class rooms}, when they are just pinning their hopes on Internet at all times.

Q2) In what location was Onoda sent during WWII, and what were his specific instructions?

Ans) Onoda was sent to Lubang Island in Philippines. His specific instructions were to disrupt the enemy operations and also to engage in guerrilla warfare.

Q3) Why did Onoda and his unit remain unaware of Japan's surrender in 1945?

Ans) Onoda's unit remained unaware of Japan's surrender in 1945 because of loss of communication. Onoda and his comrades were isolated and cut off from communication in the dense jungles. They continued to hold onto their mission being unaware of Japan's surrender.

Q4) What efforts were made over the years to contact them, and why were these unsuccessful?

Ans) Many efforts were made over the years to contact Onoda and his unit. To inform them about the war's end, leaflets were dropped, messages were broadcasted by the Philippine government but all of these went unsuccessful. It is because of the dense foliage and skepticism of the soldiers who considered all these as enemy's malicious tricks to distract them. This skepticism made all the attempts futile.

Q2) How did Norio become involved in Onado's story, and what challenges did he face in convincing Onado to believe that the war had ended?

Ans) After three decades of the war i.e. in 1974, Onado's extraordinary tale gained attention. Norio Suzuki was a young adventurer who went into the jungles of Lubang with the sole mission of finding the famous "Lieutenant Onado". It was difficult for him to convince Onado when he met him by chance. Onado was suspicious of Suzuki, yet Suzuki was bent on convincing him. He even managed to find Onado's commanding officer who flew to Lubang to officially relieve Onado of his duties. Still, Onado was hesitant and Major flew back to Japan to sought confirmation from higher officials. Only then, Onado was relieved from his duty. Thus, Suzuki faced many challenges in convincing Onado.

"Respecting State Institutions : A Moral Obligation"

Judiciary, a fundamental state institution is the guardian of justice and protecting the rights of citizens. Maintaining the dignity of judiciary is essential for a fair legal system. Therefore, citizens and leaders should not undermine its authority. Similarly, legislative branch, the voice of the people, requires public participation for effective working. Furthermore, the executive branch needs immense respect to function with transparency. Working cohesively is important for state institutions to improve overall governance. By showing faithful adherence to the principles of institutions, politicians should also inspire the public. Hence, respecting state institutions is the essential element of a functioning democracy. As citizens of the state, it is our duty to recognize the significance of this respect.
