Qno 2:- (b) Why is Hiroo considered as a symbol of strength and loyalty?

Answer- Hiroo Onoda was a Japanese intelligence officer during World War II. He was sent to Bonin Islands in 1944 to disrupt enemy operations through guerrilla warfare. He remained there for 30 years and remained steadfast to his duty despite the changing world around him. He and his unit isolated themselves and cut off from the world persisted in their mission for all these years. This is why he is considered as a symbol of strength and loyalty.

(ii)
Q: In what location was Onada sent with orders during WWII, what were his specific instructions?
explain more comprehensively

Ans: Onada was sent to Lubang Island in the Philippines with orders to disrupt enemy operations and engage in guerrilla warfare with the enemy in WWII.

(iii)
Q: Why did Onada and his unit remain isolated and unaware of Japan's surrender in 1945?

Ans: Onada and his unit were the guerrilla fighters and were present in the dense jungles of Lubang Island. Due to this reason, their communication was cut off from rest of the world. They were unaware of the changing landscape of the world after 1945 especially the surrender of Japan. For this reason, they kept doing their mission and remain isolated and unaware of the Japanese surrender. Moreover, they did not trust the messages given to them by the Philippine government and considered those as an enemy trick.

Q: What efforts were made over the years to contact and inform Onada and his men about the end of the war, and why were those attempts unsuccessful?

Ans:- Over the years, attempts were made to contact Onoda and his men about the war's end. Leaflets were dropped and messages were broadcasted by the Philippine government. These efforts remained futile because the Japanese soldiers were skeptical of the offers made. They believed that such attempts were enemy tricks and they kept persistent in their mission.

Qv. How did ~~Norio~~ Norio Suzuki became involved in Onoda's story, and what were the challenges he faced in convincing Onoda?

Ans- Norio Suzuki was a young adventurer who went into the jungles of Lubang to find Lieutenant Onoda. He found the hiding spot of Onoda and managed to convince him about the war's end. There were different challenges he faced in convincing him which were; the threat to his life, because Onoda viewed him through suspicion and was prepared for an ambush. Moreover, he managed to find Onoda's former commanding officer, Major Yoshimi Taniguchi, who flew to Lubang to officially release him from his duties. Onoda was hesitant to lay down arms, so higher ranking officers also got involved in this case to sort the situation.

Bill Clinton walked into a restaurant and asked the waiter, "do you have Biryani?" The waiter grinned, "of course, sir! Our Biryani is so good, it'll make you forget your own name!" Bill laughed, "I hope not! I need that for the Imran!"

Later, during a power outage, Imran quipped, "in Pakistan we don't need candles; our Biryani alone can light up the room!" Bill replied, "true, and if you add some spicy chutney, we might even have a 'disco party!'" They both chuckled, realizing that in Pakistan, humor and hospitality go hand in hand, making every meal an unforgettable experience.

Castles in the air:-

It's useless to build castles in the air, ~~and~~ when you're not making any effort.

Translation:-

All the degrees will be useless in coming years. There is a rapid growth in technological advancements that our poor knowledge, its sources and rest of the material is becoming irrelevant. When all kinds of information can be achieved through a phone screen, then talent surpasses knowledge and action surpasses thought process. The threat is that in future it will be difficult to teach students under one roof.
