Answer No. 3

Onoda and his unit remained isolated and unaware of Japan's surrender in 1945, because when the tides of war turned against Japan and the country was being attacked, Onoda lost all communication with Onoda and his men. Since Hiroo was stationed at a remote island, it was not easy for Japan to establish contact with them again and even Onoda was not aware of what was happening in the world due to being isolated on an island. Hence, Onoda and his comrades remained unaware of the world's situation until after 30 years, a young adventurer found him.

Answer No. 4

Over the years, attempts were made to contact and inform Onoda and his men about the war's end through different ways. Some efforts included dropping leaflets to inform, broadcasting messages by the Phillipine government but all of these attempts and efforts failed as the Onodas and his men believed all these efforts were tactics of the enemy to make them as come out of their hiding as they were skeptical cause of being isolated from the world.

Answer No.5
