QUESTION NO:2:-

Title: The epitome of oratory skills: Sir Winston Churchill.

1/5

The future of oration is uncertain. Historically, oration was perceived as a worth profession by orators. They worked hard and left valuable legacy for future generations. Presently, a decreased focus on the oratory skills is observed as evolution of print media unfolds. The impact of written words overpowered public speech. In contrast to old times where people invested and competed for the betterment of public speech. The enhanced number of speakers undermined the significance of
