Q#2

Respect as a Fundamental Element for State Institutions integrity of state institutions: vital for economic development

The institution of judiciary needs respect as it protects the rights of citizens and provides justice to all. Independence of judiciary provides for a just legal system. Similarly, a legislative branch requires respect from citizens as it ensures democracy by participation and contribution.

Moreover, the executive branch requires respect and trust from its citizens. Governance improves in a country by transparency and accountability of leaders.

By setting good principles in a country can ensure public trust in political system. A nation grows when people give respect to every institution. As a nation it is necessary to participate in the progress of state institutions.
