Bill Clinton walked into a Karachi restaurant and asked the waiter, "Do you have biryani?" The waiter grinned, "Of course, sir. Our biryani is so good, it will make you forget your own name!" Bill laughed, "I hope not! I need that for Imran!" Later, during a power outage, Imran quipped, "In Pakistan, we don't need candles, our biryani alone can light up the room!" Bill replied, "True, and if you add some spicy chutney, we might even have a disco party!" They both chuckled, realizing that in Pakistan, humor and hospitality go hand in hand, making every meal an unforgettable experience.

All the degrees are going to be useless in the next three years. The speed of technology and willingness to use it is good enough to overcome our previous knowledge; even our symbols and subjects are going to be irrelevant. When every information is available just a click away then skills prevail knowledge and action takes precedence over thought. It's a great apprehension that how religious orators will be able to inspire their listeners and how teachers will ~~be able to~~ explain the technicalities of universe to students, who have 24/7 access to internet, in a small classroom.

Comprehension Passage

① Hiroo Onoda was a Japanese intelligence officer during World War-II and he is considered as a symbol of strength and loyalty because of his resilience and faithfully following the orders of his seniors for almost 30 years. He set an example of courage and determination.

② During the World War II, Onoda was sent to Lubang Island in Philippines as an intelligence officer. He had given the orders to disrupt enemy operation by using and engaging in guerilla tactics.

③ The World War-II had ended in 1945 when the situation went against Japanese but Onoda and his unit remain unaware of the loss of surrender because of the communication and contacts with their army. They continued to be engaged in the war from their side.
