Contradiction upon the Nature of International Law

Like domestic laws, there are also laws for states' behaviour. International laws work independently, and is in between the states' domestic laws. Absence of suitable sanctions makes it un-acceptable by some lawyers. Sovereign states and International laws that are like domestic laws cannot exist together. Theory of consent resolved this issue by claiming that to be bound in International laws is a form of sovereignty. As per the definition of sovereignty, any treaty against a state's sovereignty is rejected by World's Court. The basis of this law is so rigid that the wide evaluation of its significance is not shocking. For some, it's a shame, and for others, it's a chance to ensure peace on earth, but neither view fulfilled true nature of these laws.

QNO:3 Passage

QNO1:

→ Answer:

The 'ad hominem' is a tactic that is used by the Lincoln to win against his opponent. 'ad hominem' is a quite inappropriate tactic.

QNO2:

→ Answer:

He showed his political tricks by a non-malicious use of ad hominem. He said, a man who doesn't even know that which side of his shirt ought to be in front! How could he has the knowledg of law? This tactic made him won the case.

QNO3:

→ Answer:

Lincoln tactic was non-malicious because it does not have any concern with his opponent's law knowledge that whether his shirt was wrongly weared. In view of results, it doesn't matter whether the tactic was malicious or not, because it made him win the case.

QNO 4:

→ Answer:

Lincoln took a risk by using ad hominem because this is not a reasonable and lawful argument. If I had been an opposing lawyer, I would have argued that it did not have any concern with the case whether I wore my shirt rightly or not.

Q NO 7: Translation

Every nation has a story of ups and downs. Responsibility and national unity is mandatory for it. After the second World War, Japan was facing a hard time. The destruction of atom-bombs already destroyed two cities. But for Japanese, the insult of a king was a big tragedy. The insulting behaviour of McArthur with the king ~~was~~ accelerated the thirst of revenge among Japanese. Not in the battle field, but Japan started to defeat America in every other fields, consequently, within some decades the same nation succeeded in re-acquiring occupying ~~its~~ losted fame. There is a great lesson for Pakistan in this story.
