

Question No. 1 : PrécisThe Dark Side of Media

Media is a major source of information but often times it spreads confusion through false information. In modern era, easy access to social media has facilitated an environment feeding on disinformation. The blurred line between verified information and falsehood easily mislead the public. Presentation of an issue by media determines the future narrative either through oversimplification or through nurturing alternative viewpoints. Thus, lack of understanding of complex issues lead to uncertainty among masses. Continuous exposure to news makes it difficult to sort and analyze data. This burden hinders a person's processing ability resulting in confusion. Media's role in shaping cultural narratives and societal standing produces a biased view towards person's self-identity and society. An individual feels alienated from the society because of media's showcase of irrational standards. Unsupervised media contributes to controversial content creation for the purpose of increasing viewpoint. The essential issues are sidelined. The preference to individual interest rather than societal ultimately brings chaos.
