Title: "Media's Impact on Confusion"

The passage talks about how the media helps us know things but sometimes confuses us too. False information spreads easily because of sensationalism and wanting more clicks. Social media make this worse by sharing rumors and unproven claims. The media makes complex things seem simple, creating confusion.

Too much information all the time can tie our brains, making it hard to understand things properly.

Media also shapes what we think is normal, but sometimes it gives mixed messages, making us feel lost.

When the media cares more about getting attention than helping society, it can create chaos and confusion.
