

Name: Mayam. Sajjad
Reg. No: 30864
Batch: RWP-046.
Date: 11.1.24.
Subject: Political Science, Paper II.

SECTION-A.

Q No: 3.

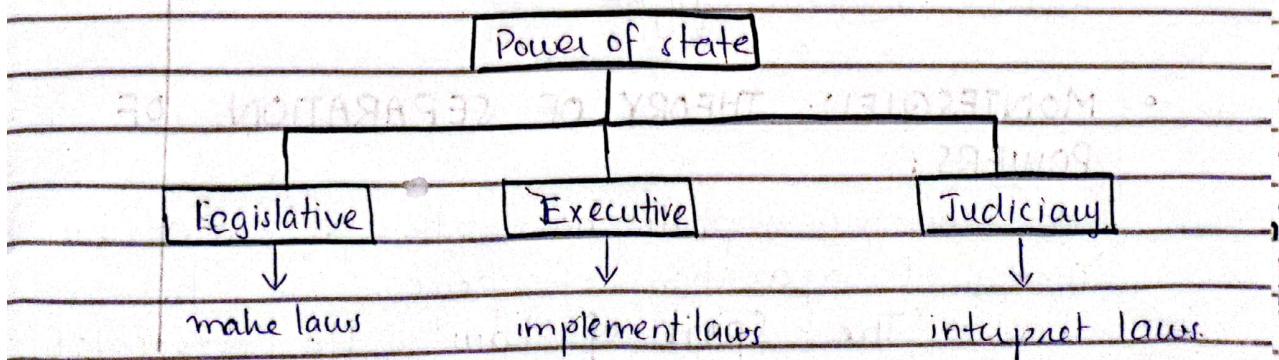

How does system of checks and balances work in trichotomy of power. Explain with examples.

Ans • Power is defined as the ability to do something. In political science, a state has been given the power, which is exercised through 3 branches, i.e. trichotomy of power

• TRICHOTOMY OF POWER:

Trichotomy of Power means that power is divided into 3 branches, which are executive, legislative, judiciary

• Figure For Trichotomy of power..

- Legislative:

Is the branch of government which deals with creation of laws and bills. In Pakistan, the Parliament can be considered as the legislature. It can be of two forms: unicameral legislature - meaning one house and bicameral legislature - meaning two houses of parliament.

Examples:

1. Iran : unicameral legislature
2. USA : bicameral legislature

- Executive:

It is the branch of government which deals with implementation of the laws which are created by legislature in Pakistan. The Prime minister is head of executive and cabinet forms his cabinet.

- Judiciary:

It is responsible for interpreting the law. It can do judicial review of bills which are passed by the legislature. In US the judiciary has the authority to VETO any law which violates constitution or fundamental human rights.

- MONTESQUIEU: THEORY OF SEPARATION OF POWERS:

He was a philosopher who presented his "theory of separation of powers" in his book "The Spirit of Law". He advocated

That the three tiers of government should be separated from one another. But he said that in case of separation of power, the all three tiers would work according to their interest. They would work for increasing their scope of influence. It will have a bad impact on the country state and its population. So he gave a concept of "Check and balance" in his theory.

- POWER MUST BE CHECKED:

Montesquieu argued that power should always be checked. As there are two major components of the society which are quality and quantity. The quality always work to increase their authority and poor always work to increase their lawlessness. So if we want to balance both the quality and quantity i.e. rich and poor so we should introduce a system of separate electorate for both of components of society. The separate electorates will ensure that both components of society will have representation in parliament and they will in this way keep a check on each other. The poor will check the richness of rich i.e. Authoritarianism and rich will check poorness of poor i.e. lawlessness.

Example: Separate electorates demanded by muslims of subcontinent can were a means to ensure check power of the majority, i.e. Hindus.

- POWER MUST BE BALANCED:

The concept of balancing power means that all components of society should balance each other's powers. The balance brings moderation in a government, where each tier of government is under balance of another tier.

Example: US political system.

- The US political system has makes use of this concept. In that system executive has the authority to veto any bill which is not passed by 2/3rd majority so executive i.e. president keeps the legislative under check.
- The US legislature keeps a check on the executive. The president can not pass any law without <sup>approval of senate</sup> regarding appointment of judges and foreign policy related matter.
- The US judiciary also keeps a check on both executive and legislative items of government by taking the judicial review of the bills and laws which are approved by them. It checks whether the laws violate any component of constitution or freedom of human rights.

The system of check and balances is very important in any constitution as it helps <sup>sub & check</sup> any tier of government from being ~~attacked~~ by another tier. It allows effective running of all parts of power. It further helps and ensure that the rights of the citizens of a state are protected Montesquieu was a great philosopher, who <sup>introduced</sup> put this idea of the check and balances to maintain hierarchy of power.

Section - B.

Q.NO. 6 Electoral system and Elections are sine qua non for Political socialization. Explain.

• POLITICAL SOCIALIZATION:-

"Political Socialization is the process by which individuals internalize and develop their political values, ideas, attitudes and perceptions via agents of socialization"

It is basically the process of political learning. We learn about political parties, political processes like elections through our political socialization.

• GEORGE H. MEADS- THEORY OF SOCIALIZATION:

George H. Meads was a sociologist who tried to explain socialization with the help of the concept of generalized others. According to him, a child starts learning and observing others behavior when he reaches 5 years of age. The child learns from others who are in his surrounding including his family, peer groups etc. So when people appraise certain aspect of one's behavior, through that appreciation a person forms the concept of generalized other and try to adopt all those aspects into his behavior. So the political parties, their campaign, political leaders, the election process, perception of public about electoral process shape the political socialization of a person.

• AGENTS OF POLITICAL SOCIALIZATION:

The agents which shape an individual political thoughts are family, peer groups, mass media, professional and religious organizations, political parties and intimate friends groups. The political parties can make use of social media campaigns to target the youth segment of the population.

The political socialization of an individual then influences the knowledge, behavior and values. It influences thoughts of an individual which in turn impact his voting preference, political opinions and political behavior. The agents and impact of political socialization are explained in Figure 1.

FIGURE1: Political Socialization.

• Electoral System and Election are Sine qua non for Political Socialization:-

The electoral systems and elections in a state affects the Political

Socialization of individuals in that state

* EXAMPLE:

The An individual learns the his political thoughts from the political socialization agent like family, peer, mass media etc. Then that person votes for a particular party. After the election, when that party comes into power will determine that either that party is working effectively or not. If a party is working effectively it will then influence the socialization of other people in a positive way. A person who has voted for a particular party, who is working very well after coming into the government will spread good mouth of word about them. It may result in increasing their supporters. But if after voting a party fails to deliver, then it <sup>mays</sup> have a negative influence on those who had good attitudes for the party. So then that event may influence the socialization of a party and <sup>supporters</sup> people of a particular party can direct towards another party.

- Similarly electoral system also play a big role in socialization. If the elections of a country are victim of rigging, then it shapes the way people think about them.

The political socialization is a lifelong learning process which is shaped by many factors including peer groups, family, religious institutions, electoral system and elections. Elections and electoral system are as directly a means of testing the direct contact with the political environment, so they play a vital role in political socialization.

QNo. 7. Has national interest been the major determinant of foreign policy of Pakistan. Explain in the light of various phases of foreign policy of Pakistan?

Foreign Policy :-

- Definition: Foreign Policy Affairs Professor Samuel Skim defined foreign policy as "government's external program of actions chosen to achieve particular goals during a particular time period".

• PHILOSOPHICAL LENS

Machiaveli was a philosopher who presented his theories regarding how a king should work to secure the interest of his state in his book "The Prince". He said that a state should maintain its relations with other countries on the basis of its interest. If a country should consider another country as an ally or enemy on the basis of its national interests. A 2

Example: US - Pakistan Relations

The relations of US Pakistan shows that the government of US makes Pakistan its ally whenever it is in need of it like during USSR - Afghanistan war and war in Tora, US wanted Pakistan because Pakistan had the Khyber Pass which could provide the land route access to <sup>us to</sup> Afghanistan. It could provide a way for the US to reach its goods and materials to the war in Afghanistan. But soon after war ended, due to same that US left Pakistan on its own. So the relations between countries are on the basis of securing its national interest.

OBJECTIVES OF FOREIGN POLICY:

The foreign policy of a country works to protect the sovereignty and integrity of a state. Its main purpose is to protect the national interest of the state. Currently the national interest of Pakistan is to ensure economic sustainability of 120M population.

National Interest has been major determinant of Pakistan's foreign Policy:

The foreign policy of Pakistan has always worked to ensure the national interest of our state. Pakistan has a history of about 76 years. Throughout these years our national interests have shifted from security, settlement of refugees, globalization, economic stability etc. All these interests have shaped various phases of our state's foreign policy.

PHASES OF FOREIGN POLICY:

The foreign policy of Pakistan have passed through following phases:-

a. ERA OF NEUTRALITY (1947-53).

Pakistan came into being on 14th August 1947. After our creation our funds were stopped by Indian government, so we had lack of resources. We had a large number of migrants, limited resources and scarce personnel. So at that time although we had proposals from capitalist and communist regimes but we tried to remain neutral. We didn't join any bloc and focused on settling our crisis.

b. ERA OF ALLIANCES (1954- 1962).

After Pakistan joined the era of neutrality, we decided our stand that Pakistan didn't want to join the communist bloc. So our national interest was to gain advantage from capitalist regime, so we joined the SEATO and CENTO in 1954 and 1955.

● BILATERALISM (1962-1971)

Pakistan joined and improved its relations with both China and US. Both of those countries were trying to contain the communist bloc due to their vested interests. So Pak interest was also to save itself from communist bloc's influence so Pak joined hands with these countries.

● MULTILATERALISM (1972-77).

After the war of 1965 Pakistan saw that US didn't help it so Pakistan focused on multilateralism. It did agreements with the USSR and gulf states. Pakistan adopted a subliberal approach to maximize utility for maximum number of people. Pakistan sent Pakistani send its diaspora to these states and remittances from <sup>country were</sup> our increased.

● ERA OF NUCLEARIZATION

Pakistan realized the importance of a nuclear weapon. As we have a belligerent neighbour who was working on nuclear weapons, so our national interest shifted towards acquiring the nuclear weapons. Although America posed sanctions on us but India succeeded in securing our national interest.

● Era of combatting Terrorism:-

After 9/11 in US The world had shaped a narrative of war against terror so the president of our state in that scenario took a nationalist decision and focused on WOT Pakistan won biggest non NATO ally of America in war of Terror.

a. Pakistan Foreign Policy (2010-2020).

Pakistan experienced a downfall in its relations with the USA. After doing a lot in WOT, Pakistan faced pressure from US government to do more. It even faced allegations of not helping the US properly. So Pakistan wanted to serve its national interests. And for this purpose it shifted towards regionalism. Pakistan secured good relations with its neighbours. Some important deals made in this tenure were TAPI, CPEC.

b. PAKISTAN NATIONAL SECURITY POLICY-

2022-2026:

Pakistan is facing a number of issues at this particular time which include the economic instability. As one of the most important issue, Pakistan is focusing on improving its economic indicators. It has realigned its foreign policy to achieve its target of improved economy. Pakistan will reintroduce the regional connectivity through CPEC. Secondly Islamabad has stated that it would not become a part of the camp politics. It would try to do relations with other countries on basis of convergence of trade, energy, investment and intelligence.

By looking at the different phases of foreign policy of Pakistan, we have seen that Pakistan how national interest has been the major determinant in shaping foreign policy of Pakistan. A state should always work towards securing its national interests. It is a wise decision to shape the foreign policy according to the interest of a state. Because a state relies on its relations with other countries. A state can't function on its own. So in 21st century As it is era of globalization and regionalization so our state should make use of it by aligning our national interest in our foreign policy.

Q.No.4. What is the necessity of a strong political system for a very strong economy. Do you think democracy can't function without capitalism. Explain.

• STRONG POLITICAL SYSTEM:

A strong political system is a system, where the governance and law and order situation are very good. A political system performance can be determined by various indicators like accountability, corruption, governance etc. The Asian development bank has given certain criteria of good governance for a political system in a country

A strong political system is the one where rule of law is observed. It is a system where justice prevails. So in such a system the public are content and the policies of government are reliable.

NECESSITY OF A STRONG POLITICAL SYSTEM FOR A STRONG ECONOMY:

A strong political system is essential for a strong economy. A state where there is predictability of law, then it is easy for the individuals to start their business. When ~~criminal~~ people will do business, then it means the production will be more and it will lead to improvement in GDP per capita. If people of a state have business, and they earn more money, then their purchasing power will also improve. So it will increase the sale of products and as a result GDP will increase.

• Case study of China:

The political system of China after the Chinese revolution focused on creating a political system in the country which was based on rule of law and accountability. So the people in state of China would face serious punishment in case of any misconduct. Due to dedication of government, the Chinese industries expanded. It produced reached to other countries through the opening of market. As a result the economy of China saw a significant improvement.

So it can be seen that a strong political system is vital for a strong economy. All developing countries should look at China as a role model of Global south, that has improved its economic position in the world by bringing reforms in its political system.

→ Democracy and Capitalism.

- CAPITALISM:- is an ideology which advocates for free market. It is a system where the businesses are owned by the private owner. It is based on the work of an economist Adam Smith. He explained in his book Wealth of Nations that the market should be free with limited state intervention and regulation.
- DEMOCRACY:- is a political ideology which means "rule by the people". John Locke was a political philosopher who gave the concept of the indirect democracy, which is the basis of western modern democracy.

◦ WESTERN POLITICAL SYSTEM:

Western Political system has the characteristics of capitalism, liberalism, and democracy. Almost all the countries of Global North which have capitalist system have democracy. In majority of countries where the democracy is implemented in its true sense has a system of capitalistic economy.

On the other hand those countries like China, North Korea which are following the communism ideology have one party system. So we can say that communism and democracy can not co-exist. In the communist ideology the main focus of state is to provide people with their social rights like food, education and health facilities but they are denied of political rights. In such countries people are normally exiled or killed if they go against the narrative of the political parties.

◦ DEMOCRACY AND CAPITALISM :-

The capitalism ideology is an ideology which does not demands the rule of a single political party. The capitalist countries like United States of America and United Kingdom are those countries where the democracy is implemented in its full spirit. In these countries the public has been aware and is well informed.

and have a public opinion in these countries. The public decides on the basis of the performance of political parties that which party will they cast their vote to. In capitalist countries, the public can exercise democracy - i.e. their right of vote. They can select their public government representatives. As we see that in United States of America the government is formed from either Democrats or Republicans on the basis of votes of people. So democracy needs capitalism. It can not function in any other systems like communism, totalitarianism, authoritarianism, and fascism. We can conclude by saying that capitalism system is the one where democracy can be established.