The atomic bomb was completely destroyed two cities but for Japanese rather than destruction the humiliation of their leader was more important. The behaviour of General Mike Aulhor with Japanese president, instigate the will of revenge inside Japanese. Except the field of war, the Japanese try to compete the Americans in every other aspect of life, at the end after few decades the Japanese were able to regain their strength and position. This story has a big lesson for a Pakistan.

Question No 2

The world has running through two laws currently, at domestic level municipal law and at state level International law. Both laws have contrasting nature. The International law works through sanctions on states. The states are main actor in international law and every state has its own position in international system, Int law has not more powerful than states but it works through mutual consensus among states. Some lawyers or officials claimed that international law is not effective because all states are sovereign and work according to interest, If international law is bounded with states their element of sovereignty will be compromised. The International law is only applicable when states are in some point. According to Wimbledon case Int law is like a will of state to prefer it or refused it. International law has unable to give complete boundaries for states to exercise it. So, for peace it is essential Law makers and politicians drafted it into comprehensive code otherwise international law has so many holes by which sovereign states perform against it.
